JAPAN ABROGATING NAVAL TREATY

BUT SEEKS ARMAMENT REDUCTION

PROHIBITION OF AGGRESSION

FOREIGN OFFICE STATEMENT

Tokyo, Oct. 17.
The Foreign Office to-day confirms Japan's intention to abrogate the Washington Treaty.

The Foreign Office adds, however, that the Government earnestly desires that the Washington Treaty should be substituted by a fair and reasonable treaty.

Japan, declares the Foreign Office, is determined to lead the way to a satisfactory agreement at the conference with Britain and the United States in London, beginning Oct. 20.

It is the intention of the Japanese Government's representatives to advocate the reduction of offensive armaments and the prohibition of aggression or invasion, the Foreign Office asserts.—Reuter.

SEA FIRE TRAGEDY FINDINGS

NEGLIGENCE ON MORRO CASTLE

SHIP'S OFFICERS DENOUNCED

(Special to "Telegraph")

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic News Agency, London, 1934. Received, October 17, 9.30 a.m.)

New York, Oct. 16.

The United States Steamboat Inspection Board has issued a scathing report following its investigation of the Morro Castle disaster, denouncing Chief Officer Warren, acting master of the vessel, and his four subordinate deck officers.

The Board has ordered all five men to appear before it on October 29 and show cause why their licences should not be suspended or permanently revoked.

The Board's report, signed by two inspectors, gives no cause for the disaster and fixes no responsibility for the fire which claimed 130 lives, but records the opinion that had the Morro Castle stopped and sent out a wireless distress signal when the fire was discovered, the loss of life would very probably have been lessened.

The report further recalls that the crew, after lowering themselves in the ship's life-boats, did not heed the cries for assistance from the passengers.—Reuter Special.

CREW CRITICISED.

New York, Oct. 16.

The Steamboat Services Inspection Board, inquiring into the Morro Castle tragedy, has ordered Acting-Captain Warren and his four subordinate officers before it on October 29 to show cause why their licences should not be revoked for negligence.

Had the Morro Castle halted and an S.O.S. been flashed as soon as the fire was discovered, the casualties would not have been so great, the Board finds in its report. The crew is criticised severely for dazing themselves and ignoring the helpless passengers.—United Press.

CRUISER RUSHED TO ASSISTANCE

TAIKOO FIGHTING HER WAY IN WILD WEATHER

NINETY LIVES IN DANGER IN CHINA SEA

URGENT DISTRESS SIGNALS FROM THE TAIKOO DOCK-YARD AND ENGINEERING COMPANY'S SALVAGE TUG "TAIKOO" WERE RECEIVED IN THE COLONY THIS MORNING TO THE EFFECT THAT SHE WAS ENCOUNTERING EXTREMELY HEAVY WEATHER IN THE CHINA SEA AND ASKING PASSING SHIPS TO COME TO HER AID.

The Taikoo, which is commanded by Captain Thirwell, and has a crew of 90 aboard, has been visiting the scene of the wrecked City of Cambridge on the Pratas Shoal, but left there yesterday and apparently ran into typhoon weather.

Aboard the tug is Mr. T. H. G. Brayfield, of Messrs. Carmichael and Clarke, who was making the trip to the Pratas in the interests of insurance companies concerned.

ANOTHER C. E. R. DEADLOCK

Japan Unwilling To Guarantee Price

Shanghai, Oct. 17.

It is learned in Tokyo diplomatic circles that Soviet-Manchukuo negotiations to go to the assistance of the tug, the Taikoo, which had made two previous unsuccessful attempts to reach the stranded City of Cambridge, left again for the Pratas on Thursday morning, and after arriving safely on the scene, the tug was to report on the possibilities of salvaging the ship or her cargo.

First efforts to get alongside the City of Cambridge failed, but the tug remained at the scene until yesterday, when the weather became much worse and necessitated a move from the vicinity of the Reef.

WORSE WEATHER.

The tug is stated to have intended making for Hainan Island in order to seek shelter, but apparently she ran into even worse weather, with the result that she sent out distress signals.

The message received this morning, shortly after seven o'clock, stated that very bad weather was being encountered and the tug asked for assistance from any ships in the vicinity. Her position was then given at Lat. 19, Long. 114.30.

On receipt of the news locally, the naval authorities were informed, with the result that it was decided to despatch the mine-sweeping cruiser, H.M.S. Adventure, to the aid of the distressed tug. The Adventure left at 9.30 a.m.

LABOURING BADLY.

Two messages have been received by the naval authorities from the distressed tug. The first stated that she was in danger and asked that passing ships might stand by.

A later message was to the effect that the Taikoo was labouring very heavily. It is now known that the Taikoo left Pratas at noon yesterday, in an effort to make for Hainan, but that she later encountered typhoon conditions. In addition to the Chinese crew, there are at least three Europeans aboard the little craft, these being the master of the tug, the Dock Company's salvage expert, and Mr. Brayfield.

"We consider," said Mr. Justice Jackson, "that it was the only rational conclusion they could have reached, and that there was therefore no miscarriage of justice."

In conclusion, Mr. Justice Jackson said: "We have confined our attention to the points at issue put before us, and do not desire that our decision should in any way affect the strong recommendation for mercy made by the jury at the conclusion of the trial."

U.S. SEAMEN HELD FOR ASSAULT

UNION'S FEUD CARRIED ON

DOLLAR SHIP'S MEN INVOLVED

Shanghai, Oct. 17.

Friction between Union and non-Union seamen on the President Jefferson, which arrived here yesterday from Seattle, caused the removal of seven members of the crew to gaol last night.

It was learned that friction occurred first when the ship reached Yokohama. Fights broke out between the two factions, and one man was so seriously hurt that he had to be taken ashore to hospital in Japan.

Last night the ship's watchman was reported missing and a search disclosed his unconscious body rolled into the dark shadows of the wharf.

Another man was also knocked unconscious and two others were assaulted.

The master of the Jefferson called the U. S. Marshal in Shanghai who boarded the ship and held a parade, the four injured men identifying the seven who attacked them. The seven were arrested.—Reuter.

YUGO-SLAV GUARDS OPEN FIRE

HUNGARIAN SHOT DEAD

NEW DISPUTE NOW FEARED

Budapest, Oct. 16.

The border population is becoming most anxious owing to the Yugo-Slavian frontier guards' shooting of a Hungarian yesterday.

The Hungarian, Franz Konec, was shot dead when he accidentally crossed the frontier.

The incident is regarded as the outcome of the excitement in Yugo-Slavia following assassination of King Alexander.

In view of past frontier incidents, which led to disputes which the League of Nations considered earlier in the year, similar troubles are feared.—Reuter.

TERRORISTS ROUNDED UP.

(Special to "Telegraph")

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic News Agency, London, 1934. Received, October 17, 9.34 a.m.)

Melun, Oct. 16.

There was a dramatic moment at the police station here to-day when the head of the Yugo-Slavian police walked up to the man Malny, suspected member of the terrorist gang which murdered King Alexander of Yugo-Slavia, and who was arrested yesterday.

The Belgrade official scrutinized the prisoner for a few minutes and then identified him as a former chauffeur employed in Belgrade. Malny, thereon, admitted that his real name was Microal, that he was born in 1908 in Yugo-Slavia.

He confessed that he had been under orders to shoot King Alexander and was beside the assassin Kalemek, killed by police sabres, at the time of the crime. But he admitted that he was too frightened to participate in the actual killing.

Knowing that, by his participation in the assassination, he was liable to sentence of death, he did not rejoin his companions who were arrested just outside Marseilles two days after the murder.—Reuter Special.

CAREER OF TERRORISM.

Paris, Oct. 16.

The Belgrade police, in co-operation with the French authorities, have definitely established the identity of King Alexander's assassin, whose fingerprints have been found to correspond with those of Vladimir Georgievich Thorenzowski, born in Macedonia in 1897, who became a member of the Macedonian terrorist organisation and who committed two Bulgarian political assassinations in 1924.

He was sentenced to death for these crimes in 1932 but was released in the general amnesty shortly afterwards, and then joined a Croat terrorist organisation.—Reuter.

Ocean Mail Service In Few Months

COL. LINDBERGH'S FORECAST

OVER ATLANTIC AND PACIFIC

(Special to "Telegraph")

Washington, Oct. 16.

Testifying before the Federal Aviation Commission to-day, Colonel Charles Lindbergh said that trans-Atlantic and possibly trans-Pacific air mail services were a distinctly likely development within the next few months.

In view of the announcement made by Postmaster-General Farley that he had received instructions from the Pan-American Airways that it expected to undertake a trans-Pacific service immediately, Col. Lindbergh's announcement is significant.—United Press.

INTERNATIONAL PROBLEMS

Shanghai, Oct. 17.

When asked as to the prospects of immediate establishment of the suggested trans-Pacific air service, a high Chinese official stated to-day that some technical international political problems have to be overcome before it can be brought into existence.

He said that long-drawn discussions in respect of the problem of establishing stations in the Far East would likely be experienced.

The Pan-American Airways Corporation has already ordered its planes for the ocean service, however.—Central News.

TAKING CROSS TO DEVIL'S ISLAND

Former Prisoner In Role Of Messiah

DREADFUL YEARS IN CONFINEMENT

Paris, Sept. 23. Ullmo, the man who survived 26 blistering years on Devil's Island, is going back. But not alone; he goes with what he believes to be The Word. He thinks he's the Messiah, the second Christ.

The "affaire Ullmo" was the sensation of France in 1907, when the Dreyfus case began to settle down to the sort of routine which belongs to-day to the Stavisky scandal.

M. Benjamin Charles Ullmo, 26-year-old naval ensign, son of a respected Lyons family, was trapped as the writer of a letter offering to sell back French military secrets which had come into his possession. If they were not sought back, according to the letter, they would be sold to a foreign power.

Ullmo admitted he had succumbed to temptation for the sake of a Toulon beauty, one Lison Welch—"La Belle Lison". Having spent on her his personal fortune, which was considerable, he had risked dishonour to keep her affection, and lost.

The young naval officer was sentenced to life banishment and sailed for Guyana July 17, 1908. Until 1923, or for fifteen years, he lived alone on a rock surrounded by shark-infested waters. The only men he saw were the guards who visited him twice a week. Dreyfus himself was the only other man to have suffered such a fate.

WORK ON MAINLAND.

The government relenting in 1923, Ullmo was allowed to go on the mainland, where he hired out to a local industrialist. Guyana Prisoners often are authorized to work for planters or miners, earning thus a pittance which makes life for them more tolerable.

All the time, though he did not know it, several persons were working in France for his pardon. Outstanding among these was Madeleine Madeline Poirier, a Paris nurse, with whom eventually he had a voluminous correspondence.

The pardon finally came and Ullmo arrived in Paris on July 4, 1934. Ullmo gazed with interest but without excitement on the changes which a quarter of a century had produced in his homeland. He soon left Paris for a beach near Ostend.

Fifteen years of solitary confinement and twenty-six of broiling in the "land of the damned" had left an indelible mark on the spirit of this man who had thrown his life away in a moment of folly. He brooded in the Channel mist.

HEAR "THE CALL."

"The call" came a few weeks after Ullmo's return. A newspaperman who had been among those who worked for his pardon went to see him and returned to Paris with the extraordinary revelation.

"I am going back to Guyana in the fall," Ullmo said. "I am going to bring salvation to those who are there expiating their earthly sins."

Questioning brought out Ullmo's conviction that he is the Messiah. "Nineteen centuries have elapsed since the tragedy of Mount Olivet," he said. "That is the first sign. The Pope realised the knell had rung when he ordered the Holy Year of 1933. The Scripture says the Chosen One shall be son of David and a member of the tribe of Judas."

"My father's name was David. How can I prove that I come down from Judas? By the double treason, first to my faith, being an Israelite professing in the Roman Church, and second to my country."—United Press.

DIET FOR AN INVALID

A person who is suffering from a sore throat, or who is recovering from an operation for the removal of tonsils, or who has had many teeth extracted, has to have food that is nourishing and very easily swallowed and digested.

Bread and milk, milky foods, beef tea, egg beaten up in milk, are ideas that at once occur to the mind. One wants to vary these items, and soups are good, and minced chicken or meat, vegetable purees, meat jellies, custards, puddings, milk puddings, etc., are other suggestions. Potato soup should have the potatoes thoroughly mashed. Onion soup should have the onions passed through a sieve; it is a good way of serving cheese, too, and thus providing protein; for grated cheese should accompany onion soup.

Mutton broth could be well simmered and then strained. To get as much nourishment as possible into the liquid, always simmer soup instead of boiling; and thus draw all possible good out of peas, beans, carrots, barley, sago, macaroni, or meat.

Baked custard should be varied. Make it savoury by adding a little meat extract, a small quantity of pounded fish, a little sieved tomato pulp, or some minced parsley and mint. When it is served sweet alter the flavouring—cinnamon, nutmeg, vanilla, a little extra-strong coffee, a little pineapple juice, some grated chocolate, and a little brandy. Blancmange and junket can be served with mashed apples, prunes, or jelly. Prune jelly is excellent. Get the patient to take cream whenever possible, as it is pure nourishment.

MYSTERIOUS GAS "ATTACK"

VILLAGERS SUFFER ILL EFFECTS

The inhabitants of Willsbridge, near Bilton, Gloucestershire, dispatched a petition to the Ministry of Health regarding the chlorine gas fumes which have invaded many of their houses.

Mr. J. G. Ashley told a reporter of the effects of the fumes in his house. "The paint on my doors and windows is changing colour. Green paint is going grey, and cream paint is going black," he said.

"At night, when the air is still, the fumes are almost overpowering, and I have to get up and gargle my throat. Other members of my household are complaining

GERMAN FACTORIES FOR BRITAIN

WOMEN'S GOWNS AND OVERCOATS

RESTRICTION OF IMPORTS

Plans are nearly complete for 18 German firms, engaged in the making-up of women's gowns and coats, to establish branch factories in England. Nine factories will be situated in the City and West-End areas of London, and nine in the Manchester district. Work in some of the factories will begin this month, the precise dates being partly determined by seasonal requirements.

One firm has already set up its branch headquarters in Regent Street, W., and certain others have obtained premises elsewhere in London or Manchester. Negotiations are now proceeding on behalf of the remainder for the acquisition of suitable buildings. The assistance of the Manchester Development Committee has been sought in relation to sites in that city. Although the negotiations are being carried on more or less simultaneously and through one channel, each branch will retain its separate identity.

A number of limited companies have already been formed in this country by the parent firms. They are not being financed here or from Germany. Each concern has received permission from the German Government to send over from Germany goods to the value of 20,000 marks. That Government has also laid down various conditions regarding the financing and management of the branches designed to safeguard German interests concerning the amounts of German raw materials used, the effect on German employment, and in other directions.

IMPORT RESTRICTION.

The opening of these factories is stated to have been decided on partly in consequence of the import restrictions now existing in relation to the British and other markets. It is intended to make-up certain special classes of goods with varying styles for each particular market, and of a kind hitherto produced only in Germany. The eighteen firms, all of which have their headquarters in Berlin, are in the aggregate responsible for a huge export business in made-up clothing. It is not intended to manufacture textiles here, but to confine operations solely to the making-up side of the industry.

Each branch will, in addition to workshops and other accommodation, have a large showroom for the use of wholesale buyers. All the machinery will be purchased in Great Britain, and Lancashire and Yorkshire textiles will be largely used. Certain kinds of material not obtainable in this country will be imported from Germany or elsewhere.

It is expected that, when the initial stages have been completed, the factories will provide increased employment among garment workers. Official permission has been granted for a number of German "key" workers to enter England for a limited period to train local employees, as the latter will be engaged on unfamiliar operations in which skill is required.

of irritation of the throat and eyes.

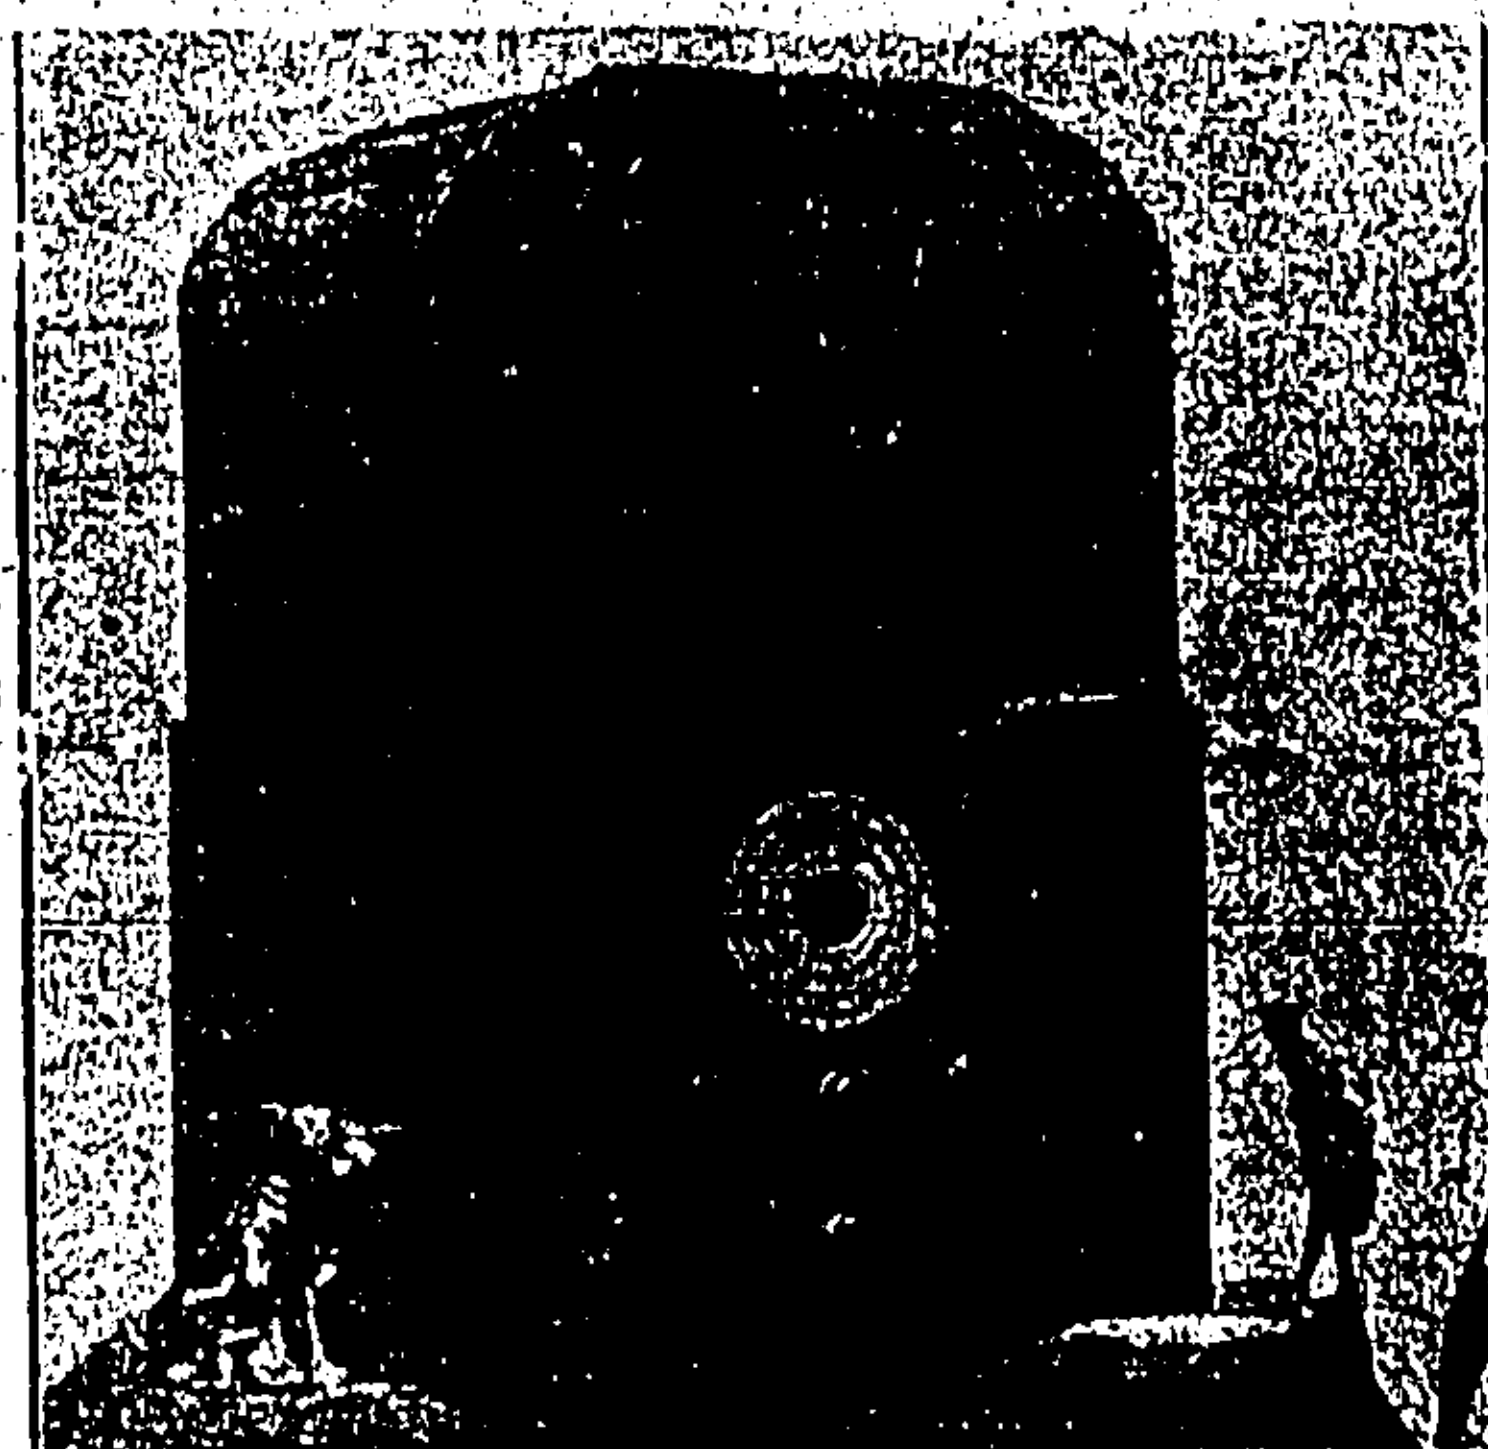

Similar conditions obtain in many other houses in the village.

Mr. Ashley attributes the fumes to sprinklings of chloride of lime in the Willsbridge Brook, but the Sanitary Inspector, Captain W. H. Kneeb, states that as far as he knows no chloride of lime has been put into the brook.

Dr. T. Aubrey, the local medical officer, is also puzzled as to the origin of the gas. "There is no doubt," he said, "that this is chlorine gas."

BRITISH SPEEDBOAT SETS WORLD'S RECORD

SCOTT PAINE'S HEROIC RETIRING ACHIEVEMENT IN ITALY

A new world's record was established by Mr. Hubert Scott Paine, when he drove Miss Britain III. at an average speed of 177.185 k.p.h. (approximately 111 m.p.h.) over a measured mile at Venice.

This easily beats the late Sir Henry Segrave's speed of 92.68 m.p.h., and also beats Mr. Scott Paine's unofficial record of 102 m.p.h. established at Southampton last year.

Mr. Scott Paine actually covered the outward mile at a speed of 178.811 k.p.h. (approximately 112 m.p.h.), but he was slower coming back, his average being 175.560 k.p.h. (approximately 110 m.p.h.).

By having a mean average of 177.185 k.p.h. (approximately 111 m.p.h.) over the measured mile, Mr. Scott Paine broke the world's speed record for salt water, the world's single-engined boat record, the European sea mile record, and the Italian sea mile record. These records were previously held by the late Sir Henry Segrave with a speed of 92.68 m.p.h.

Mr. Scott Paine had a narrow escape from disaster when a seaplane landed across his bows.

TAKEN TO HOSPITAL

Striking like a bullet across the water at 110 m.p.h., the wash of the seaplane struck Miss Britain as a hard ridge. She jumped four times into the air, and it was only a miracle that the boat did not break her back or overturn.

"If the boat had not been so strongly built," said her driver, "those jumps would have broken her back."

The spray almost blinded Mr. Scott Paine and his mechanic, Gordon Thomas, but the former suffered a more severe discomfiture. Each time the boat jumped, the back of the driving seat forced its way against the small of his back at the exact spot where it had received such a buffeting in the Harmsworth Trophy races last year. So great was the pain that the British driver was all but obliged to break off the attempt, but he pluckily stuck to it and thus gave his country more records and fresh prestige. He would, indeed, have made a further attempt had it not been for

made in 1929.

Only one record did Mr. Paine fail to beat, and that was the Volpi Trophy lap record of 123.620 k.p.h. (approx. 77.26 m.p.h.), set up in 1925 by Sir Henry Segrave.

Mr. Scott Paine's feat is all the more remarkable in that Miss Britain's engine is five years old and Mr. Scott Paine did not think he had sufficient room prior to the start to average over 100 miles an hour.

When one considers that the world record of 124.981 m.p.h., established by Commodore Garfield Wood, of America, was made with Miss America, a four-engined boat of 8,000 h.p., and that Miss Britain, with her single engine, is only of 1,375 h.p., one can readily see what a magnificent effort Mr. Scott Paine's was.

HIS LAST RACE

"This was my last race," said the British speed-boat racer. "I have definitely decided to retire from the game. I am, therefore, especially glad to have set up these new records, in particular the world's speed record for salt water. If our heritage means anything to us, the salt water record is surely the one which should be of particular importance to us."

"My object has been to show that we can use a petrol engine and drive a boat with a better performance than anybody else. And I think I have proved this. I want to see, however, more attention given to motor boat racing in England. We have concentrated on the air and land records, but have neglected sea records, which, seeing that we are a sea-going nation, is not good for our national prestige."

Mr. Scott Paine was the designer of Miss England II, the boat in which Sir Henry Segrave established what was then the world's water speed record, and he himself he raced against Gar Wood, the American, who holds the present speed record, at 124 miles an hour, in an effort to regain the Harmsworth Trophy.

At Detroit a year ago, in the second heat of the Trophy contest, Mr. Scott Paine was beaten by only 22 seconds by Gar Wood's craft, the engines of which developed seven times more power than the British boat.

MURDERED HIS SON

SENTENCED TO DEATH

SORDID CASE IN LONDON

Sentence of death was passed by Mr. Justice Atkinson at the Old Bailey, London, on Thomas Joseph Davidson (34), a poultry breeder, for the murder of his son, whose body could not be found.

"There is no doubt," the Judge said in his summing-up, "that this boy died while he was in the sole custody of the prisoner. No one else knows what happened."

After an absence of a quarter of an hour the jury found Davidson guilty. They recommended him to mercy on account of the condition of his mind at the time the crime was committed.

Asked if he had anything to say, Davidson replied firmly, "No, sir." Mr. Justice Atkinson, passing sentence of death, said that the recommendation to mercy would be sent to the proper quarter, together with any extenuating circumstances there might be in the case.

Davidson showed no emotion, but stood erect as sentence was passed. He seemed as if about to say something, but the warden tapped him on the shoulder and he left the dock.

Mrs. Davidson was not present in Court, and was told of the verdict in the hall outside by a friend.

Davidson had pleaded not guilty to the murder of his eight-year-old son, John Desmond Davidson, and the prosecution alleged that after the boy disappeared from Hanwell, Middlesex, in December last the father made repeated statements that he had killed him and put him on a burning refuse dump. If he had done that the body would have completely disappeared.

It was stated that he had not been on good terms with his wife and had made repeated efforts to get her back with him. In an alleged statement he said that when he failed to get her back he had no further interest in life, took the boy to a canal, and jumped in with him. When he got out he found that the boy was dead and took him to the dump. Later when he went back for the body it had been covered and he could not find it.

M. Max Reinhardt, famous theatrical producer, is to give America "A Midsummer Night's Dream." He is shown here with Miss Shearer, screen actress.

Ottawa, Oct. 1.

The reclamation of millions of acres of what was formerly the world's finest wheat land, now a desert of dry, powdery, windblown

The battered lumber schooner J.B. Statton, shown hard aground on a rocky reef off the Monterey coast, California, coast. The vessel crashed in a dense fog and was abandoned after a hopeless fight to free it from jagged rocks. A crew of 21 men was brought ashore by Coast Guards.

soil, is engaging the attention of the experts of the Dominion Government, and of the Governments of the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta.

Sixty per cent. of Saskatchewan's vast cultivated area has been dried out, and 40 per cent. will not produce a marketable crop this year. In thirteen municipalities in Southern Manitoba a million acres has been drought-stricken. The dry area in Alberta exceeds 2,000,000 acres.

In some districts there has been no real rain for five years. There are horses and cattle who have never felt the pitter of the rain on their backs or munched away at rain-washed pasture. The plagues of grasshoppers have denuded great expanses of country. Russian thistle, spreading north from the United States (whence the grasshoppers also migrated) were cursed as weeds and now provide the only feed for cattle in many districts.

The humus has gone from the soil and the problem is to restore it and provide some binder that will hold the soil together. Attempts to restore it to its prairie state, suitable for ranching, have failed: the grasses cannot catch. Proposals for reforestation and afforestation have met with the fundamental need of the trees themselves for moisture. The poplar bluffs which dot the prairies are dying off, and the sloughs, with their frog-inhabited waters, have dried up.

Plans have been made to relieve distress and feed the impoverished farmers, provide seed for next year's problematical crops, and cure for millions of half-starved cattle. Farmers who five years ago were prosperous are now on relief. One striking proposal is that the waters of the South Saskatchewan river be diverted to the dried watercourses of the south. The northern areas, well-treed, are bountifully supplied with rivers and lakes.

NEW ZEALAND TO BENEFIT

AUSTRALIA LOSING ENGLAND MARKET

QUARREL OVER TARIFFS

Manchester, Sept. 23.

Long-suffering Lancashire has at last exploded with indignation—the cause being the discovery that the Commonwealth of Australia, in disregard of the spirit of the Ottawa Agreements, proposes to erect a prohibitive tariff against Lancashire's cotton goods.

Feeling in Lancashire has run so high at this unexpected blow from one of the Dominions that many are urging a "boycott" of Australian dairy products, unless the offending duties are withdrawn. The association of grocers in the mill town of Bolton have already agreed to handle no Australian produce until the tariff is withdrawn. This movement is spreading.

The cotton mills themselves have taken no part in the proposed "boycott" but they have sent an influential deputation to the Board of Trade in London and to the Australian High Commissioner.

Exports to Australia are vital to the trade in cotton piece goods. During the six months ending June 30, exports to that Dominion, at £1,785,662, ranked second only to the exports to the vast population of India, at £3,780,441. Argentina came third as a customer, with £1,498,128.

TARIFF DEMANDED.

But Australia has a lusty "infant industry" which demands a tariff

To raise the treasure aboard the "Lutina," which sank 113 years ago, this weird gear has been built.

3,000 and 12,000 bales of cotton per annum.

But this combination of mills and growers has the ear of the Australian Labour Party. The argument submitted to the Tariff Commission was to the effect that if Australia went no further than Canada and provided for only two-thirds of its consumption, Queensland could market at home 200,000 bales of cotton, employing 20,000 farmers and 95,000 pickers.

This view appears to have carried the day, and the tariffs on certain lines which the four mills produce have been increased 100 per cent.

Perhaps the most serious aspect of the situation is its repercussion upon the relations between the Mother Country and the Dominion, especially during the forthcoming Imperial Conference. New Zealand, in its anxiety to sell its dairy a tug which crossed his course. It was obviously impossible and dangerous in the extreme to attempt higher speeds with so much other craft on the water.

Baron Franz von Papen, former Vice Chancellor of Germany is able to get at the task of mending the seriously shattered relations between Germany and Austria. If the threatened Austrian revolt develops he will be kept busy. He is shown on his arrival by plane in Vienna.

After his race, Mr. Scott Paine, who was in agony from his injury, was examined by a doctor on the spot, and later taken to a hospital, where he was X-rayed. No lasting damage has been done, and while he is still uncomfortable, he will be all right again in a few days.

"CONTINUALLY OBSTRUCTED"

"I think I could have done 115 m.p.h.," said Mr. Scott Paine, "had the racing conditions been ideal. But not only was I continually obstructed and on occasion had to cut off the engine, which lost me several miles, but I did not get as much room for my dash to the start as I should have liked, although it was not as bad as I expected."

Few people had the privilege of watching the British racer break his records, as he purposely kept his attempt secret.

Not only did Mr. Scott Paine break the records but he won the Prince of Piedmont's trophy for the best speed over the measured mile. He also broke another record when he won the Count Volpi Challenge Trophy, for he beat the late Sir Henry Segrave's record for the Volpi Trophy course with an average speed of 115.147 k.p.h. (approx. 71.96 m.p.h.). Sir Henry Segrave's record was 112.218 k.p.h.,

CO-OPERATION

NANKING-CANTON ANTI-RED PLAN

Canton, Oct. 16. It is officially learned that General Chan Chai-long, Commander-in-Chief of the Cantonese Armies, has reached an agreement with General Lo Chek-ying on certain fundamental measures relative to Canton-Nanking co-operation in carrying out the last stage of the anti-Red campaign.

General Lo Chek-ying, Commander of the 18th Army Corps, arrived here by air from Hankow on October 10 for the specific reason of discussing this matter with the Canton military leader. General Chan Chai-long has summoned General Yu Hon-mao and General Yi Yang-ching to Canton in order to continue advanced discussions with General Lo Chek-ying on the details of the Canton-Nanking co-operation in respect of anti-Red work.

There are now only three or four districts, including Juichin and Hui-chang remaining under the control of the Reds.—Central News Agency.

Dr. Wang in Canton

Canton, Oct. 16. Dr. Wang Chung-hui arrived here this morning from Hongkong. He told pressmen that the Central Government was anxious to secure full support from the South in order to work out national unification, in tidying the country over the present crisis.

He added that when he interviewed Mr. Hu Han-min in Hongkong, the question whether the latter would proceed to Nanking to attend the Fifth National Congress of the Kuomintang was not raised.—Central News Agency.

STREET SLEEPERS' APPEAL

The appeal which has been launched for a minimum sum of four thousand dollars to permit of the expansion of the work of the Street-Sleepers' Shelter Society is one which should meet with a ready response. It is not too much to say that this Society is discharging one of the most humane and essential pieces of social work ever undertaken by any organisation in the Colony. Until it began its self-imposed task, it was a standing reproach to the whole Colony that night after night, during the cold winter weather, hundreds of poor people should be found huddled up on pavements and such other spots as they could find in which to pass the hours of sleep. For many years, with each successive cold season, the plight of these unfortunates was the subject of passing comment, but the difficulties of dealing with the problem which they presented were so magnified as to result in general acceptance of the viewpoint that nothing could really be done in the matter. Thanks, however, to a few ardent souls who refused to be discouraged by the admitted obstacles, a start was eventually made by adaptation of the old St. Peter's Church as headquarters, and the experience thus gained has proved once and for all that the problem can be tackled with a large measure of success. The Society admits quite frankly that it has so far been able to touch only the fringe of the question, but it has been so encouraged by the results already obtained that it has laid plans for the provision of another shelter in a locality in which a census has shown that there are usually over five hundred street sleepers nightly. But this is only part of its scheme. The eventual hope is to establish shelters in various other districts, until the time comes when street-sleeping will be a thing of the past. A point which needs stressing is that these people, who are being given needed shelter in clean and comfortable surroundings, are genuine residents of the Colony for the greater part. They are mostly unemployed, either through old age or inability to get work, and are most appreciative of what is being done for them. The old bogey that the opening of such institutions would attract ne'er-do-wells from places outside the Colony has been shown to be only a bogey, a fact which is demonstrated by the enquiries made from Canton and Swatow as to how the shelters are worked, so that similar institutions may be

NOTES OF THE DAY

ANOTHER SCARE

Vienna has had another scare. It was learned, by intercepting Communist plotters' messages, that a plot was being planned, and troops and police were hastily sent to various points in the city, armed with machine-guns. The authorities are taking no chances. And no wonder! Austria has had two civil wars within the year and two more embryo rebellions have been nipped. With the tension between Yugoslavia and Hungary developing, following the assassination of King Alexander, and the rivalries of other powers in the Balkans, the statesmen in Vienna are not always easy in their minds. With Dr. Kurt Schuschnigg as Chancellor and his skilful diplomacy, and Prince von Starhemberg as chief of the Heimwehr and ready to meet trouble with a most unpleasant remedy, Austria should be able to keep her house in order, and there is little likelihood of danger arising from that point as it did during the Nazi revolt in July.

ANOTHER STORY

Between Yugoslavia and Hungary, however, relations are strained. Yugoslavia's warlike people are in no mood for argument. They have just lost a king whom most admired and respected, of whatever party they might be, and they have laid the blame with some justice—at Hungary's door. They declare that the terrorists who plotted the assassination of King Alexander sheltered on Hungarian soil, and in this they are correct. But the charge that the terrorists' activities were tolerated and winked at by the Hungarian Government is another matter. That has yet to be proved. It is to be hoped that the response to the Belgrade protest to Budapest will be of the variety that "turneth away wrath."

A POET

That imagination and the mathematical mind may be co-existent in a single brain has been recalled by the erection recently of a canopy over the tomb of Omar Khayyam, at Nishapur, Persia. English-speaking people are familiar with this duality in the case of "Lewis Carroll," author of "Alice in Wonderland," and Rev. C. L. Dodgson, for many years mathematical lecturer at Oxford and writer of mathematical works. They are one and the same personality. Dodgson's "Euclid and His Modern Rivals," his most noted book, is the obverse side of the whimsical romances of the whole "Alice" series. The Persian poet, whose fatalism has been made so attractive in Fitzgerald's beautiful lines, was also a mathematician. Like Dodgson, he knew his Euclid. Indeed he was one of the most prominent of mathematicians of his age, and blazed the way to the modern union of analysis and geometry by his classification and systematic study of equations. From the brain that was full of conics, cubics, quadratics, biquadratics and the like, came the compelling thought:

The moving finger writes; and having writ
Moves on. Not all your piety
Nor wit
Can lure it back to cancel half a line,
Nor can you tears wipe out a word of it.

AND MATHEMATICIAN

It is one of the ironies of literature that Omar's countrymen, probably because of clerical influence which considered him a heretic, have long forgotten his verse, while remembering his mathematical and astronomical researches. When the late Sir Mortimer Durand, according to The Manchester Guardian, asked Shah Nasir ed Din whether something could not be done to repair Omar's grave, the monarch laughed and said: "Do you mean to tell me that there is a society in England connected with Omar Khayyam? Why, he has been dead a thousand years. Besides, we have better poets than Omar." Englishmen, however, who may not know the Persian scientist love the music of the "tent-maker's" verse. They may have never heard of Dodgson the mathematician but have taken to their heart Lewis Carroll, the dreamer.

provided in these cities. It is also to be noted that the Society has been able to find work for some of the most deserving cases, and as its activities are extended it will doubtless be found possible to do even more still in this direction. A word of tribute is due to the volunteers workers and others actively interested in the movement, but their greatest satisfaction arises from the knowledge that they are discharging a really useful piece of communal work. It is now for the public to do its part by providing the means without which the Society will be unable to function to the full extent of its intentions and desires.

PUT LAND TO USE AND MEN TO WORK

By RICHARD ST. B. BAKER

The author of this article is chairman of the Forestry Association, of Great Britain and founder of The Men of the Trees. Describing the big forestry work inaugurated by President Roosevelt under N.R.A., he pleads for a forestry scheme for Britain, to provide healthy employment for thousands who are out of work.

TO the man who enjoys three square meals a day it may or may not be of concern that there are thousands for whom life offers no prospects in their old occupations. Tens of thousands more, leaving school, and not knowing where to look for employment, are suffering from moral and physical deterioration.

To them and those concerned in their future welfare, news of the success of the Forestry Camps of America may bring fresh hope and even suggest to our own Government a means of providing immediate employment for many.

My work as Forestry Adviser in America enables me to speak from personal experience of the forestry work inaugurated by President Roosevelt. After his inauguration, one of his first measures was the establishment of a volunteer civil conservation corps of young men, and this proved to be one of the most popular schemes carried through under the New Deal.

I have seen these young men living very close to nature and camped mostly in the wildest places, for it is usually in such places that the forest can best be improved. Here in the woods their meals were in the open, even in pouring rain. They had to fetch and carry water, and cut wood for fuel. Except for their daily ration they were dependent upon themselves for everything.

Healthy? Of course they were healthy, both in mind and body. More than that, they were creative. They had hewed a home from the wilderness and were carrying out work of national importance.

They were thinning and improving the forests of their land, cutting fire lines for protection, and planting trees not only to produce timber, but to conserve moisture and reduce the risk of droughts.

To-day there are over 350,000 of them working in the woods. Ask any one of them whether he would change his life for city lights and he would laugh at you—he simply would not be in camp unless he wanted to be. There are many more applications than vacancies.

Do they work? Judge for yourself when I tell you that this army of woodmen and foresters has in the course of one year saved over £45,000,000 worth of forest from being lost by fire. They have improved 5,000,000 acres by thinning, clearing and other means, and over 300,000 acres have been freshly planted with trees. In addition, campaigns against tree diseases and harmful insects have been carried out on 10,000,000 acres.

More important, however, than material gains is the effect of such work on moral. I believe that in England to-day the overwhelming majority of unemployed who are now walking the streets and receiving relief would infinitely prefer to work like the lads in the forest camps of America. They would like to plant up those derelict-looking slag heaps which scar the face of the land and turn the Black Country into beautiful forest scenery.

Forestry is of urgent importance to England now. Although we have beautiful trees, our country is very badly off for forests. During the war four-fifths of our woodlands were sacrificed. That is having an adverse effect on our water supply. At the present rate of planting it will take 140 years to regain the position held before the war.

Furthermore, in a single year we have paid to foreign countries over £70,000,000 for timber, much of which might have been grown at home, providing work for thousands.

The Forestry Association of Great Britain is supporting a plan for a nationally-conceived scheme to give employment to 20,000 people in forestry on three million acres of waste land, half of which is in England and Wales and half in Scotland. What is the reason why this plan should not be put into operation at once? It has been calculated that every day this plan is postponed the loss to the nation is over £200,000 in timber which might be growing on those three million idle acres and producing this value of timber daily.

Before the war there were about 40 uses for wood. To-day there are over 4,000 uses for forest products in one form or another. The U.S.A. had cut seven-eighths of its virgin forest and while it is already Canada's largest customer, it is now being driven back on Russia for supplies, and that country, at the present rate of cutting, will deplete its accessible forests in thirty or forty years.

In view of the present world situation it would be unwise to continue to depend so greatly upon other nations to supply our needs. Although we are no longer dependent upon "Wooden Walls" as bulwarks of defence, nevertheless wood still plays an important part in our national safety. It has been well said that if a nation saves the trees, the trees will save the nation.

"And we'll send him to some swell college, where we can drive to on week-ends."

The Very Idea!

A DOG'S LIFE

By George

DEAR GEORGE, As a Peakite of considerable longevity I wish to draw your attention to the attempts being made by our local magistrates to disparage the status of Peak Dwellers and Their Dogs.

I refer, Sir, to the invidious practice of imposing a fine of $15 on dogs which commit offences on the Kowloon side as against a mere $10 fine on this side.

The Secretary of the Dear Dogs Society has asked me to say that we on this side feel rather piqued at the distinction.

Is it meant to be a slur on the quality of the dogs on this side? If so I may point out that many residents are proud of the fact that their pets have a longer pedigree than their owners in many cases, whereas a Kowloon dog's pedigree is no longer than a Gaschund.

May I beg, Sir, for the discontinuation of a practice which, while it promotes bad feeling between the laipian and the clerk also aims a blow at the social status of the canine population on this side.

In the meantime an attitude of passive resistance is being maintained here, the dogs refusing to leave the house except for the most necessary purposes.

I enclose $50 collected from Peak dwellers as a donation to the S.P.C.A. and trust that the public will not allow matters to remain where they are at present. Yours etc., S. Panell.

Received my book for month of August.

Would like to no if I can get another book as this month's book seems to be too large for an ordinary library. It doesn't make a difference how thick a book is but the height of it, what's bad.

Yours truly,

GREAT NEW BANK STONE-LAYING

SIR WILLIAM PEEL TO OFFICIATE
AT SIMPLE CEREMONY

MARKING ANOTHER ERA OF PROGRESS

The laying of the corner-stone of the new Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation headquarters to-day, by his Excellency the Governor, Sir William Peel, marks the commencement of another era of progress in the life of this great organisation. The building, on the old City Hall site, will be of magnificent proportions. Its great steel skeleton already is sufficiently advanced to indicate its size and a promise of grandeur to come.

The site on which the new building is being erected has been referred to as the finest in the Colony of Hongkong, and the building now being erected will be worthy of the site. The building covers the site of the old Bank and, in addition, that of the Theatre Royal and Wardley Street, and extends the full width of Statue Square.

The main axis of the new building is centred on the Queen Victoria Memorial, situated in the centre of Statue Square, and the building has been designed to provide a fitting background to the Square.

The frontage to Des Voeux Road is 247½ feet and that to Queen's Road approximately the same, the actual building being two hundred and twenty feet square, leaving a private roadway on the West side.

The height to the top of the tower will be 220 feet and this will stand out clear to the view of ships of all nations entering the harbour, as a dignified memorial to the world of the importance of the Banking Corporation to be housed therein.

The stepping back of the upper floors and tower was dictated by the necessity of avoiding interference with the light and air of adjacent buildings. The resultant outline is, however, both pleasing and interesting.

The building has been designed on simple and dignified lines throughout, the solid base without any windows on the Des Voeux Road front suggesting the impregnable strong rooms behind the wall. The massive piers, the full height of the tower, will be terminated with carved figures representing Men of Vision. The carving will be strictly architectural, square with severe lines suitable to the hard material in which they are carved. Four massive lion heads representing Strength complete the sculpture on a number in the windows, over the Des Voeux Road entrance, will represent China, Japan, India and the Federated Malay States, the countries in the Far East in which the Banking Corporation interests chiefly lie.

The central panel will bear the Coat of Arms of the Bank.

The level of Queen's Road is several feet above that of Des Voeux Road; there is therefore a Ground Floor and a lower Ground Floor, and below that a Basement to accommodate the Boilers, Pumps, Ventilating Machinery, Workshops, etc.

Main Hall.

The main Banking Hall will be at the Queen's Road level and be the Treasuries, Safe Deposit, etc., at the Des Voeux Road level. The administrative offices, including Chief Manager, Managers and Chief Accountant, will face Statue Square. The main Banking Hall will be about 210 by 95 feet, with a mezzanine at the ends. The height of the Banking Hall will be 27 feet, over the working space, with a barrel vaulted ceiling 47 feet above the public space.

The first to the seventh floors inclusive of the building have been designed as offices for letting. At the top of the Tower will be provided a Rest Room and Luncheon room for the staff with a gallery around the upper part of the Tower, flats for senior married employees, a flat for the Chief Manager, and a Squash Court, etc.

The banking portion of the premises will be the last word in Bank design and equipment, being the result of study of the most modern Bank Buildings in Canada, America, London and the Continent of Europe.

The whole building will be ventilated by a "conditioned air installation", providing ideal conditions of temperature and humidity all the year round, irrespective of external conditions. The advantages of true air conditioning (which should not be confused with air cooling) are now recognised all over the world. All dust and filth is first eliminated from the air which is then dehumidified or humidified cooled or warmed as outside conditions require. All parts of the office will be equally comfortable all the year round. Small offices therefore fulfil requirements which previously necessitated large offices.

Noise Eliminated.

As windows are closed noise is eliminated, a great comfort on busy streets; perfect air conditions can be maintained during typhoons or bad weather, electric fans not being required with a consequent saving in first cost and running expenses not to mention the elimination of the annoyance of having papers blown about; air conditioning is comfortable, it safeguards health and increases efficiency, and by the elimination of dust a considerable saving in maintenance costs of a building results, particularly with moving parts and machinery.

The Main Entrance to the Bank is from Queen's Road. The Bronze Gates are designed with a grille over suggesting a portcullis; in the design three knights in armour stand guard and the whole design symbolises protection and safety. The Entrance Hall is an irregular octagon in shape, about 460 sq. ft. and rises to a height of 27 feet. It is of granite throughout. The lighting will be by projectors hidden in granite pedestals. In the wall opposite the main entrance gates approached by five steps is a bronze screen and doors, incorporated in the design being the coat of arms of the Bank. The thick granite walls, the stone ceiling and heavy bronze gates give an impression of immense strength.

Passing through a lobby, which serves as an air lock to prevent the cooled air escaping, we enter the Main Banking Hall.

The Banking Hall.

This is of great size, being 210 feet long and 95 feet wide. The Public Space is continuous from the Queen's Road entrance to the stairs from the Des Voeux Road entrance on each side; the ceiling of this space will be barrel vaulted, the floor being 47 feet above the floor.

The only decoration in the building has been concentrated in this vaulted ceiling which will be covered with glass mosaics. The design consists of two main groups of figures in colour, symbolic of Banking and Commerce, the former supported by Agriculture and Mining, the sources of all wealth, the latter supported by Industry and Shipping.

At the top of the vault in the centre is an allegorical group composed of Ceres the Goddess of Abundance with her Cornucopia and Helios the God of the Sun driving his Chariot across the sky and shedding light on the groups of figures below. It is fervently hoped that by the time the Bank is finished this brightness and abundance in the world of Banking and Commerce will be an actual fact.

The walls and columns in the Banking Hall will be finished with marble, much of it coming from Devonshire, England, a beautiful dark marble, called Ashburton. The floor slabs to the walls and central piers will be a light coloured marble called Botticino. The floor of the Public Space will be paved with Travertine with bands of Swedish Green. The ceiling of the working spaces will be of plaster without enrichment.

The general lighting of this hall will be by concealed lights—the system has been designed by London experts and will provide an even shadowless light over the entire working space.

Administrative Offices.

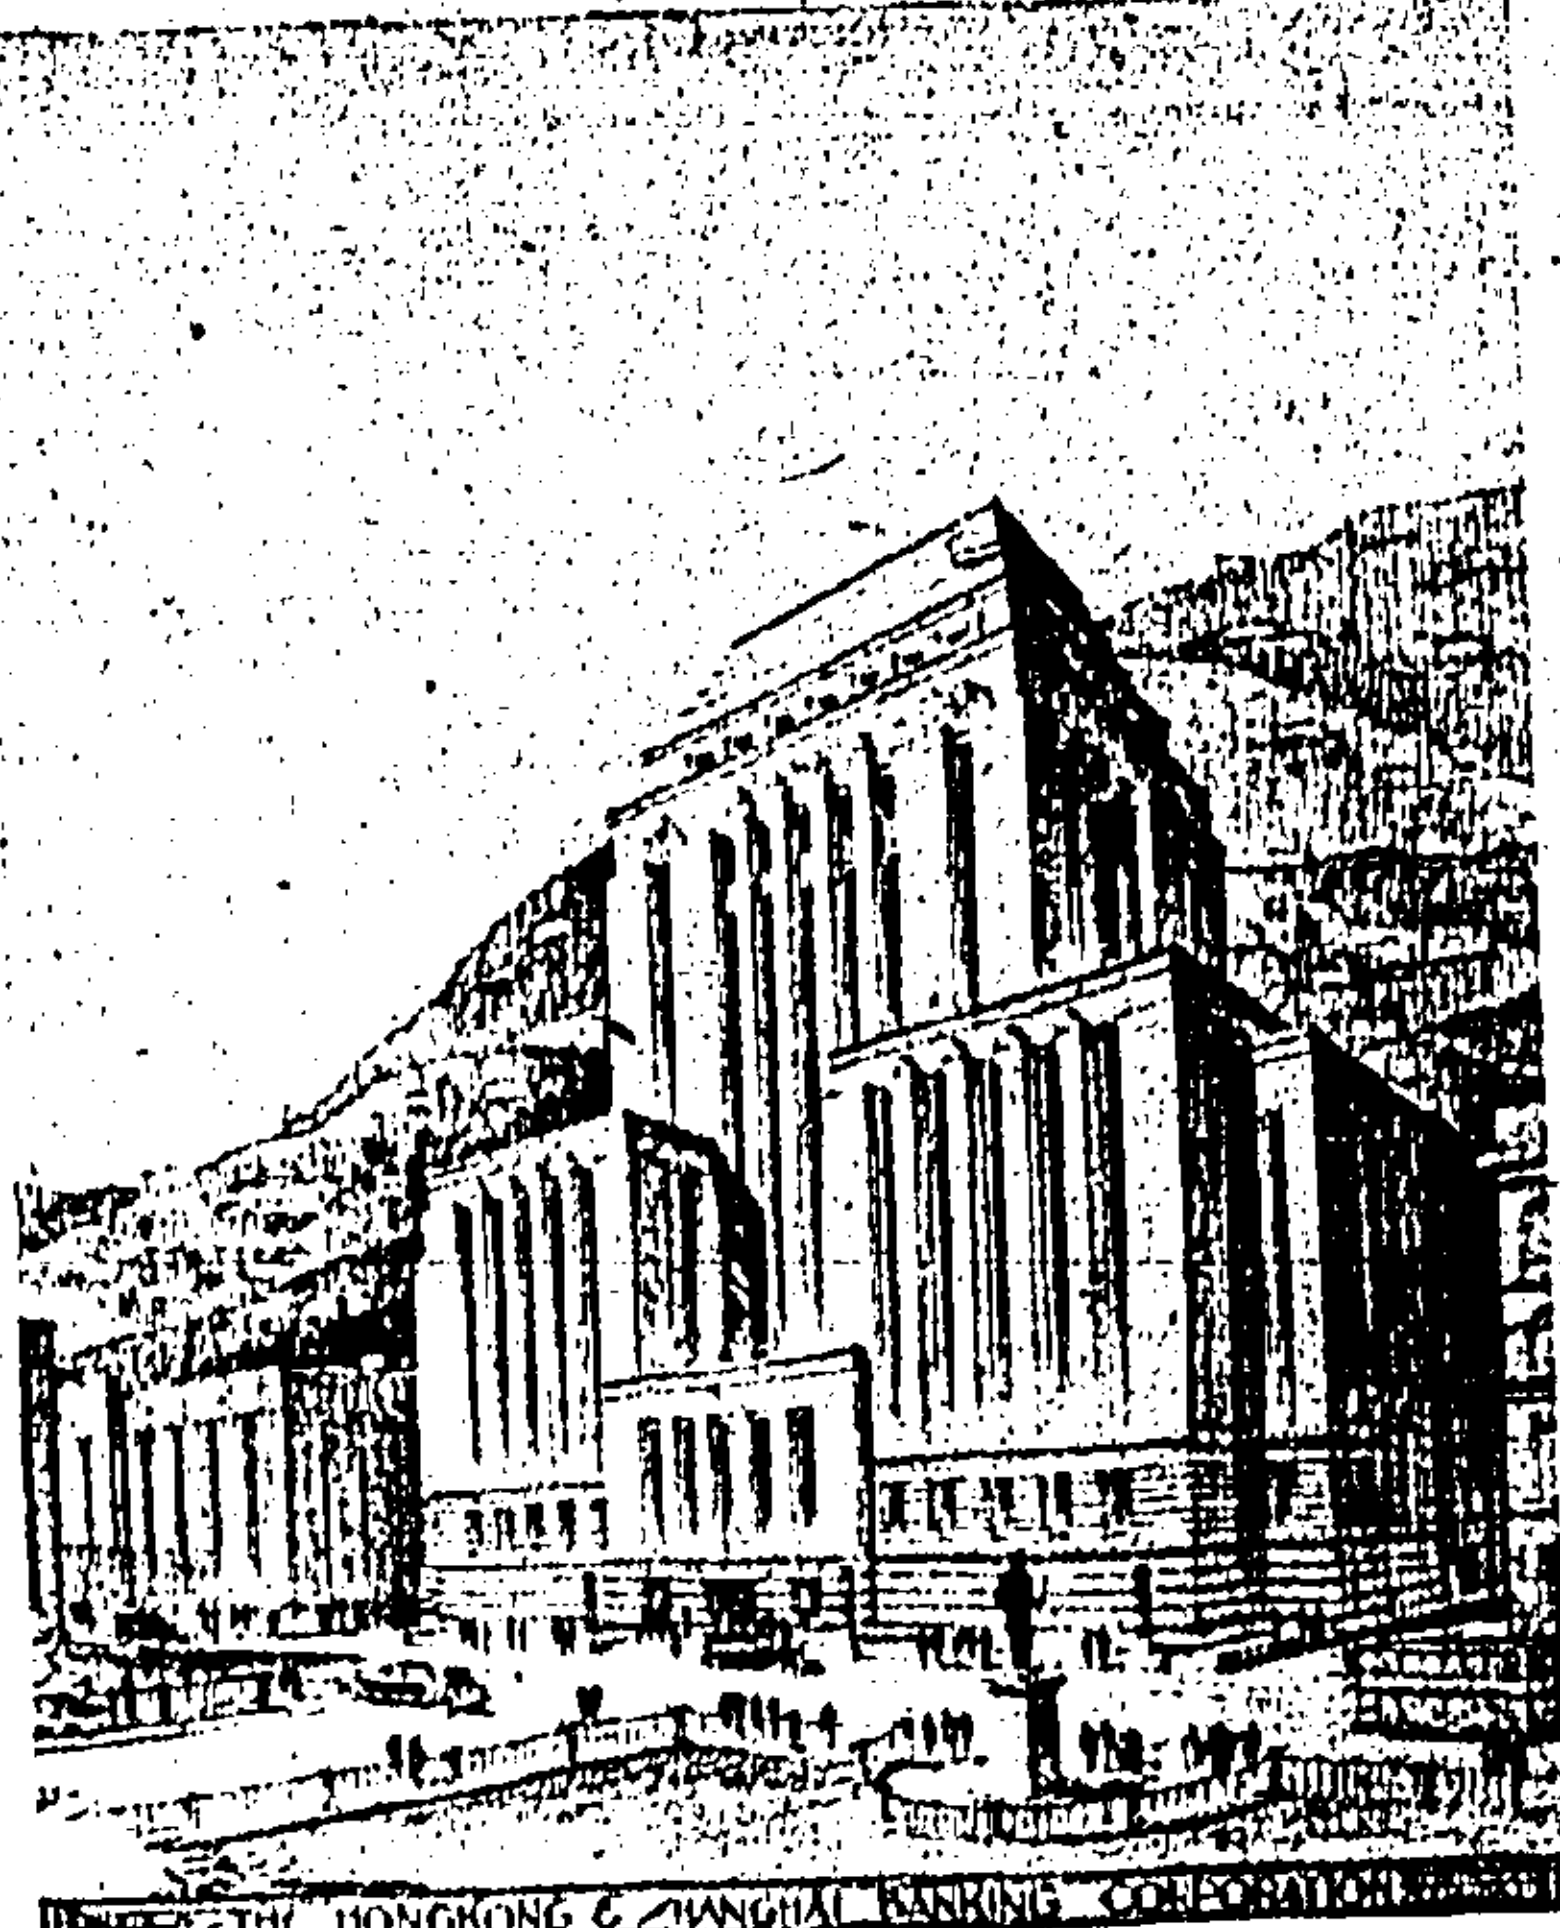

The administrative offices adjoin the North end of the Banking Hall and overlook Statue Square. They consist of the Chief Manager's Private Room, Manager's Room, Secretary's Room, Waiting Room, Telegrams, Books, Chief Accountant's Department with special Securities Room, Interview Rooms and Brokers' Room, etc.

The Brokers' Room is provided with twelve telephone boxes.

The walls and floors of the principal rooms will be finished with a light coloured marble, and special recesses for safes, codes, books, etc. have been provided.

Des Voeux Road Entrance.

The second entrance to the Bank from Des Voeux Road is below the executive offices, the main floor being reached by a wide marble staircase and two fast automatic lifts for brokers.

The magnificent new Hongkong and Shanghai Bank as it will appear from Statue Square upon completion.

On passing through the bronze entrance doors from Des Voeux Road into the Entrance Hall, on the left will be seen a bronze screen with double doors giving access to the Safe Deposit and the Staff lifts and staircase, on the right through a similar screen is the Office entrance hall and lifts.

Safe Deposit.

The Safe Deposit will be one of the strongest in the Far East. The main door will weigh 17 tons and yet will be so beautifully balanced that it can be moved with one finger. In addition, there will be an emergency door of equal strength.

The 6,000 boxes and small strong rooms inside the main chamber and the ceiling will be of stainless steel. The lighting will be on the indirect method and needless to say all the latest methods for ensuring the safety of customers' valuables have been incorporated in this wonderful Safe Deposit, which will also be air conditioned. Small rooms fitted with steel desks, telephones and other conveniences are available for customers who wish to deal with their valuables without removing them from within the protective grille.

Electric Lifts.

There will be eleven lifts in the building, all of the latest patterns. The passenger lifts will run at a speed of 500 feet per minute and will be automatically controlled. All the attendant has to do is to press a few buttons and the machinery does the rest.

Mezzanine.

The Mezzanine at the North end overlooking Statue Square provides accommodation for the Board Room, Sub-Managers' Room, Filing Rooms, Telephone Exchange, retiring and rest rooms for women employees. The Board Room will be about 800 sq. ft. The walls will be lined with a specially selected sandstone, the veining of which closely resembles walnut panelling.

The Mezzanine at the South end provides accommodation for Stationery Room, Filing Rooms, Lavatories, Rest and Changing Rooms for the Portuguese and Chinese members of the Staff.

Fireproof Construction.

The building will be of fireproof construction throughout, the only wood used will be the parquet floors in the residential quarters. The steel frame is of Chromodore Steel, this being the first building in the world where this steel has been used throughout. Chromodore steel is a chrome copper steel of a strength 40 per cent. greater than ordinary mild steel. There is therefore a very considerable reduction in weight and in cost of transportation and erection, and the resistance to corrosion of this steel is nearly double that of mild steel.

The materials for the building are being obtained almost entirely from the British Empire. No difficulty, no pains or trouble have been spared in finding and securing whatever seemed most suitable for the different parts of the structure.

Air Conditioning.

The roofs are being specially insulated against the heat of the sun, and the whole building will be "air conditioned." The advantages of air conditioned offices will appeal to prospective tenants, the stirring up of vitiated air by fans being now out of date; tenants will benefit from ideal atmospheric conditions and from the saving in the cost of fans and current to run them. This Air Conditioning Plant has been designed and is being installed by experts from London.

The Invisible Panel Heating System will heat the building in winter—this is the latest system and the conditions in a building so heated are far more comfortable than when heated by any other method. The heat being radiant heat the same degree of comfort is obtained with a lower temperature of the air; it is healthy and there are no radiators to obstruct furniture or interfere with the division of the office.

Amongst other features of the building may be mentioned the Grids of conduit to be laid in all office floors to enable a telephone to be installed on a desk in any position without running loose wire along the walls, floors and ceilings; the Oil Fired Boilers; the Automatic Telephone Exchange; the Emergency Lights to Treasuries, Central Counter, Corridor and Staircases in offices in case of a breakdown of the Electric Company's plant.

The building is being designed by the Shanghai office of Messrs. Palmer & Turner, Mr. G. L. Wilson, F.R.I.B.A., F.S.I., Architect for the Shanghai premises, being responsible for the design of this building also.

The organisation and direction of the construction programme is in the hands of Messrs. M. H. Logan and L. W. Amps, M. C. INST. C.E., Chartered Civil Engineers, who have brought out from England a staff of expert supervisors and special machinery for the purpose.

Who wants to think of the next morning, when one is spending happy hours in the circle of one's friends? If one has been unwise, either drunk or smoked immoderately, then 'GARDAN' will come in very handy, as it rapidly relieves headache.

Good advice is never amiss: take 'GARDAN' even before going to bed when you will awake with a clear head and free from pain.

THIS WEEK'S GREAT LONDON "DERBY"

Arsenal Meeting Tottenham At Highbury

COLOURFUL FOOTBALL PROGRAMME

Arsenal's ground records threaten to be shattered on Saturday, when the Highbury team of classical footballers meet Tottenham Hotspurs in the big London "Derby." And not only can attendance figures expect to go by the board; one can also confidently anticipate a brilliant exposition of the modern game of soccer. Both teams take the field fresh from their triumphs of last week, when the Arsenal humbled Manchester City and Spurs went to Roker Park and beat Sunderland.

At the moment the Arsenal are heading the league, and they will naturally be all out to retain that distinctive position. On the other hand here is obvious a rejuvenation in progress in the White Hart Lane camp, and if the Spurs get going they will take a lot of stopping.

Not that this is the only interesting match in the first division. There is Derby County's visit to Manchester, Preston's journey to Pompey (where Stoke last week scored an unexpected victory), and Grimsby's trip to Liverpool. Anything may happen in either of these games.

In the second division we find Bolton on foreign soil for the second Saturday in succession, and this time they are up against the redoubtable Hull City, a nasty nut for any team to crack. Blackpool, Brentford and Fulham enjoy home fixtures, and ought to win in each case, but Manchester United, who have enjoyed a fine run of success lately may find themselves up against it at Newcastle, where desperate efforts are being made to revive a team in the Blues.

There are a couple of teasers in the southern section of the Third Division. Charlton have to visit Coventry and Crystal Palace will be entertained by Clapton Orient. Coventry went down the drain last Saturday, but that was away, and on their own ground are much more formidable. If Charlton win here they will go a long way to establishing themselves as favourites for promotion.

Millwall and Reading are on their own pasture, as are Exeter,

ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL IN THE SCHOOLS

F. A. To Distribute Instructional Book

The Football Association is to distribute more than 20,000 copies of an instructional book on football to public, secondary and preparatory schools throughout the country. This will be the first step in a campaign to influence schools to play Association football. The instruction book is entitled "Football—How to Succeed," and it is written for the National Union of Teachers by the Reverend K. R. G. Hunt, the former English International and Cup Final medalist.

Essex County Football Association will experimentally appoint coaches within its area and if this proves satisfactory, coaches will then be available on application to schools elsewhere. An instructional film for use in the schools is also to be provided. Elementary schools are not barred from these benefits, but most of them are already members of the Schools Football Association.

and appear as safe as anybody for a couple of points apiece.

The outstanding engagement in the northern section is that between Halifax and Chester on the former's enclosure. I prefer the chances of Halifax. Tranmere and Wrexham look fairly safe, but what price Doncaster's chances at Walsall? Here's a sporting proposition to make complete those three away winners!

INTERNATIONAL SOCCER FLARE-UP THREAT

DANGER EMPHASISED BY MATCH AT CLAPTON

NEED FOR COMMON INTERPRETATION OF PLAYING RULES

(By F. M. Carruthers)

Unless something is done to reconcile the Continental with the British view of how football should be played I am afraid there is bound to be serious trouble.

The authorities must recognise the gravity of the present situation, but they are allowing matters to drift.

The position is a delicate one, but unless action is taken it will become worse, and there is a real fear that one day international relations will be imperilled.

Throughout the summer leaders of football have regarded with disdain the bickerings in cricket and have declared that such things could not possibly occur in their own game, but unless they put out the fire which is already smouldering it will burst alarmingly into flame.

I do not think there was an official who watched the match between Clapton Orient and the Sportklub Rapid of Vienna who was not concerned by what happened.

AUSTRIANS SURPRISED.

The Austrian players were transparently ignorant of the conditions under which we expect the game to be played. When free kicks were given against them, some for bad fouls, according to our interpretation of the rules, they were mystified and in their own way asked, "What have I done wrong?"

The Continental conception of what is legitimate in defensive play is totally different from our own, and the difficulty arises because we may not say that we are right and they are wrong.

If British and European teams are to continue to meet there must be a better understanding of what is proper.

The chief divergence of view occurs in defensive measures. I doubt very much whether it is true that European players do not use the charge, but they rely mainly on a studied system of obstruction.

RUGBY TACKLES.

There was one case in which a Clapton Orient player was sent headlong as he was about to go after the ball when it was twenty yards away, and the Vienna player who "stopped" him could not understand why he was penalised.

Instances were common of men being pulled off the ball by the arm, and they were even tackled round the waist in Rugby fashion. It was obvious that the Austrians were accustomed to do these things, and that they did not see anything wrong in them.

In many important matters Continental football is different from our own, and although the rules are the same for both I do not see how it is possible for teams to play properly and fairly unless they are observed in the same spirit and with the same intention.

UNFORTUNATE.

There is not a club who have been on the Continent who do not accept the situation as I have stated it and appreciate the dangers.

I believe that Manchester City have made up their minds not to go on tour again, and I am convinced that until matters are adjusted it would be advisable for the matches to be suspended.

It is unfortunate that the Football Association are not members of the International Federation who govern football in Europe and other countries abroad. They were driven out over the question of payment of amateurs for "broken time." But the interests of all the countries are now so closely inter-linked that there ought to be some way of definitely settling the conditions under which all teams should play.

Arsenal Beaten At Blackburn

FIRST DEFEAT OF SEASON

London, Sept. 19. The Arsenal were beaten for the first time this season at Ewood Park yesterday, where Blackburn Rovers scored twice without reply.

The Champions were not in their best form, probably due to the rain-soaked pitch. Their attacks lacked the usual precision of movement, and when there was shooting to be done the forwards seemed too hurried in their efforts.

Alex James was missed. The quick-tackling Blackburn halves had little difficulty in breaking up the Arsenal attacks, and they also found time to set their own forwards on the path to goal.

The Rovers always looked the more dangerous side, and although they did not score until 34 minutes had elapsed, with a little luck they might have had a substantial lead at the interval.

Bruton drove in a great shot, which cannonaded against the body of Hapgood, who had fallen back between the posts, and a few minutes later Talbot struck the crossbar with Moss beaten.

Apart from the absence of James, for whom Marshall deputised, the Arsenal rested Roberts and Coppinger. Slaney and John filled the vacancies at centre-half and left-half.

Twenty-five thousand spectators saw Blackburn Rovers exert heavy pressure from the kick-off. Bruton caused Hapgood some anxiety with his rushes down the right wing and his rushes when the winger broke through. Moss did well to save.

Drake found difficulty in evading the attentions of Carver, the Rovers' centre-half, whenever Marshall gave him a usable pass, and it was left to Bruton to test Binns with a first-time shot from an acute angle.

After thirty-four minutes the Rovers took a deserving lead when a fine concerted movement by their forwards gave Thompson chance to open the score.

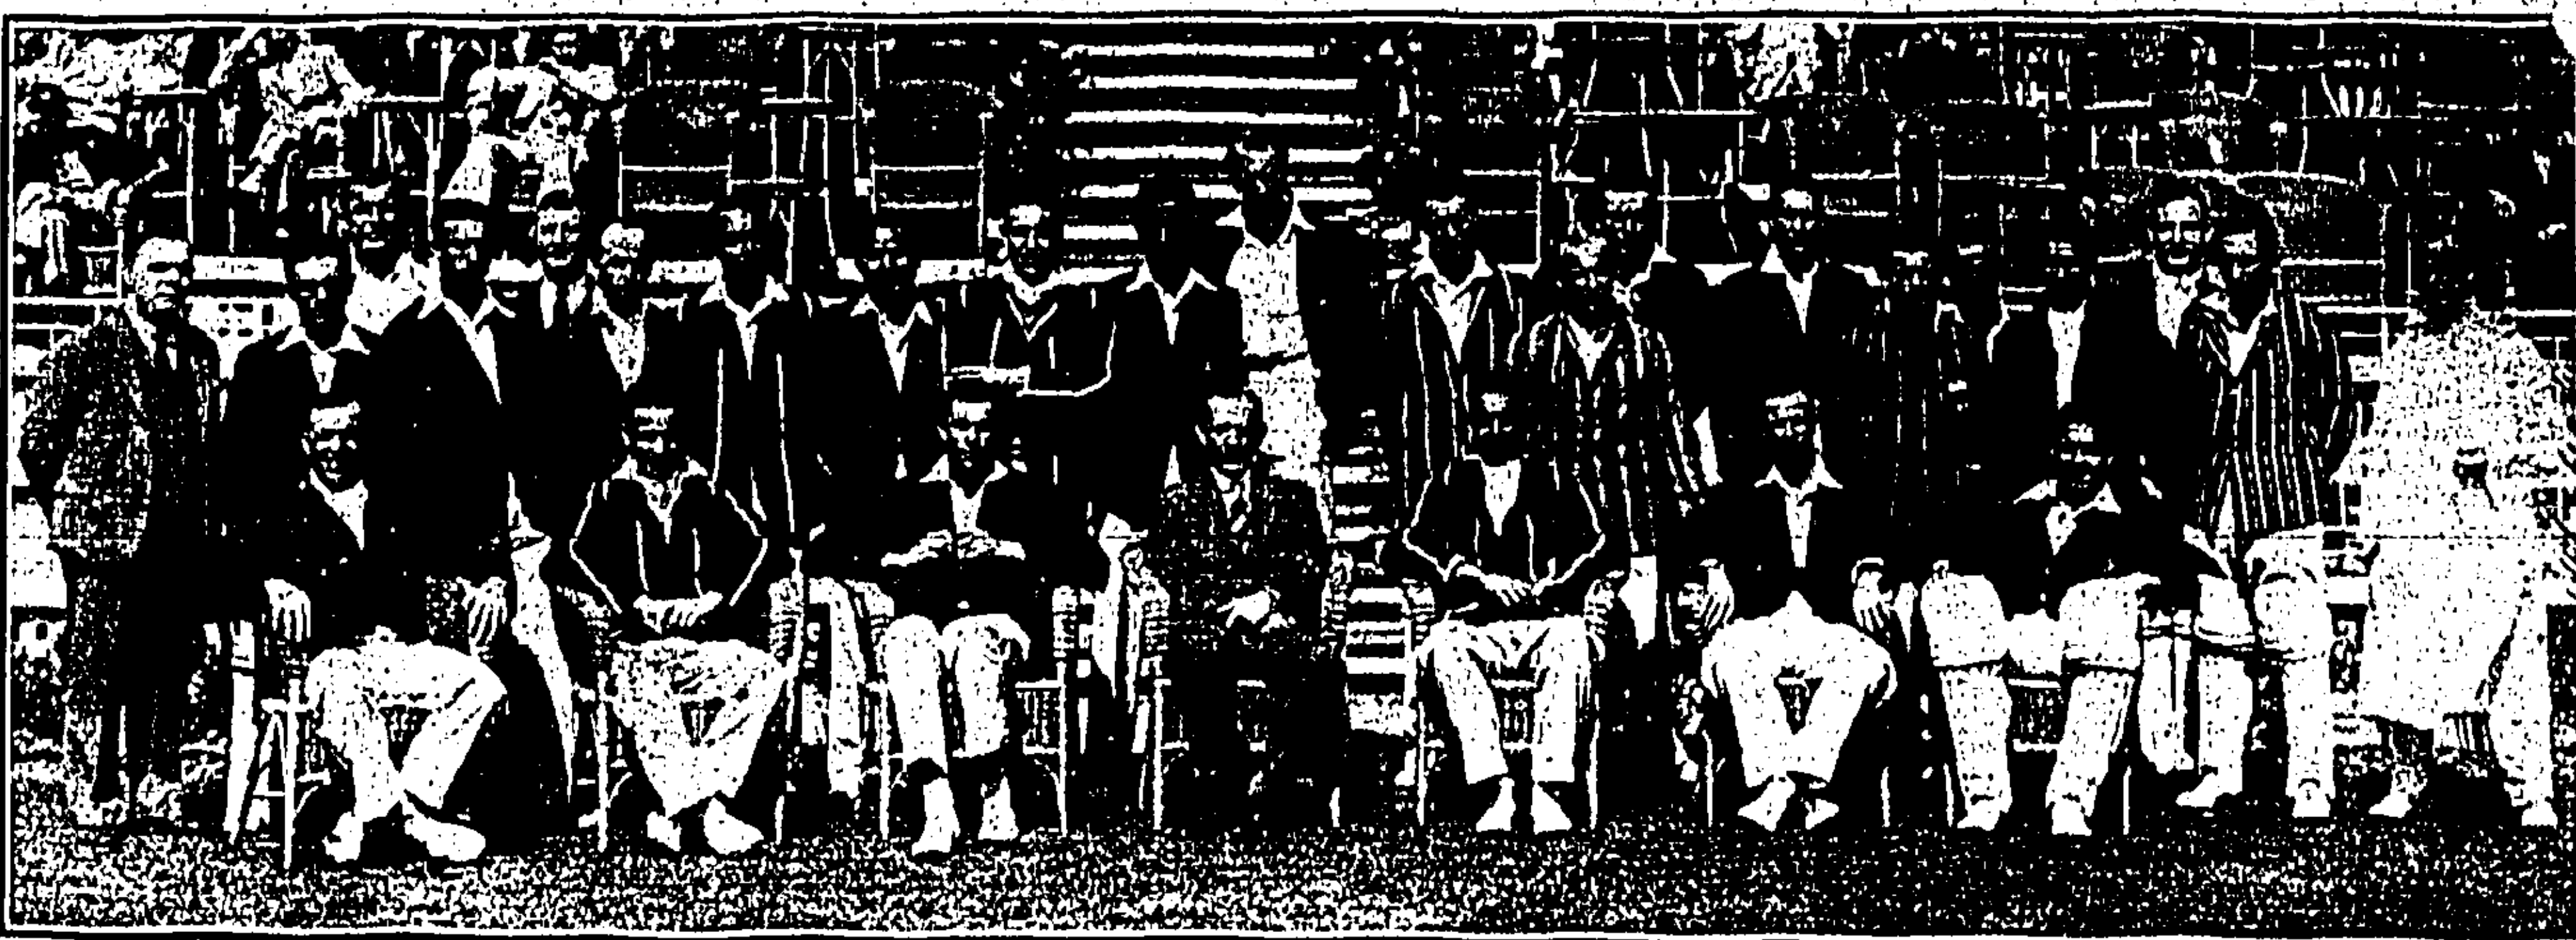

It was not until near the end of the game that the Arsenal began to show their real form, and Binns, in the Blackburn goal, was kept busy when the visiting forwards made desperate efforts to save the match.

From a breakaway the Rovers increased their lead, again through Thompson.

Shanghai eventually won comfortably by 270 runs, the Colony putting up an unexpectedly poor opposition in the face of some brilliant batting by L. F. Stokes and Kermani, and the bowling of "Pat" Madar, Leach and Stokes.

NEW STATUS FOR LOCAL BADMINTON

ASSOCIATION ESTABLISHED BY UNANIMOUS VOTE

DRAFT RULES AND REGULATIONS ADOPTED YESTERDAY

(By "Veritas").

Backed by the unanimous approval of club representatives, the Hongkong Badminton Association came into being yesterday evening, when, at the same time, the recently formed Badminton League, became extinct as a governing body.

The objects of the Association are to advance and safeguard the interests of badminton in the Colony, and to manage all championships and league competitions.

The game therefore enjoys the protection and assistance of a parent body, and the rapid progress of badminton here can be confidently anticipated.

That clubs are keen was evidenced by the close attention paid to the draft regulations and rules and of the many constructive amendments put before the meeting and passed.

SAME OFFICIALS. Coincident with the formation of the Association, it was also agreed that the officials elected for the Badminton League should continue to hold office in the Association, and they are as follows:

President:—Rev. J. R. Higgs. Vice-President:—Mr. D. H. Hazell. Hon. Treasurer:—Mr. R. Kirkwood. Hon. Secretary:—Mr. S. A. Gray.

Executive Committee. Messrs. F. H. Kwok, R. H. Wong, E. da Sousa, A. E. Collins, C. H. Summers, and Lee Kuan-yu.

Mr. Dennis H. Hazell, president of the Association, presided over yesterday's meeting held in the Board Room of the South China Morning Post, Ltd., the Rev. J. R. Higgs being unable to attend owing to a previous engagement.

VALUE OF AN ASSOCIATION. In proposing that a Badminton Association of Hongkong be formed, the chairman explained that the Executive Committee of the Badminton League had felt that a league in itself was too restricted in its activities and control, and that an Association, with its wider powers of administration, was highly desirable.

It was also felt that such an Association would be in the best interests of the game, in the Colony and could do more to foster it than a league, which beyond its own competition, could not operate with any authority.

Mr. S. F. H. Bernard seconded, and the proposition was unanimously carried.

Then followed discussion on the draft rules as formulated by the Executive Committee of the League. These covered both the regulations of the Association and the rules to govern a league.

Asked to decide on the question of an annual affiliation fee, the meeting agreed that it should be $10 for every club. This is naturally in addition to the entrance fees to participate in the league. The Association has also agreed to follow the rules of the recently formed International Badminton Federation, and in due time will probably make application for affiliation to that body.

LEAGUE RULES. Chief rules concerning the league included the provision of new shuttlecocks for every match, the shuttles to be a medium speed and complying with the regulations of the Federation.

It was also decided to play a "round robin" system whereby every pair meets every pair one game of 21 points up. An amendment that teams should nominate first, second and third pairs and that these should play their opposites only, in the best of three games, was defeated.

Another important rule which met with approval was that giving permission to a player to play for a different club if his own club was entered only in one division, although he cannot, of course, play for more than one club in the same division.

A report was made to the meeting of the various courts inspected by the committee to determine whether they were fit for league matches, when it was announced that all, save one, appeared suitable. In that one case, arrangements would be made for the club's teams to play their home fixtures on opponents' courts.

Entries for the league are being invited forthwith, as it is hoped to have the competition started in November. To assist in the compiling of the fixtures, all clubs competing are asked to inform the hon. secretary on what nights of the week their courts are available. By this means home matches can be allocated to suit the convenience of the clubs.

CAMBRIDGE
RUGBY
PROSPECTSTWELVE BLUES IN RESIDENCE

Cambridge will have 12 Rugby Blues in residence this term—a fact which may be a definite embarrassment to the skipper, W. J. Leather.

On the face of things, the vacancies will be for a centre and quarter. Leather, in residence this term—a fact which may be a definite embarrassment to the skipper, W. J. Leather.

Seven of the pack which did so well at Twickenham remain: W. J. Leather, who should make a really good leader. A. M. R. C. who played for Wales, R. D. Murray, who was picked for Scotland, but who withdrew owing to knee trouble, which has now been put right. J. H. Bowman a big forward who may go a long way. J. R. C. Lerd, a sound, if not spectacular, forward. C. D. Laborde and J. M. Griffiths.

For the centre and quarter-half J. R. Stewart and R. D. Hearn are the pick of the seniors, but a good Freshman might have a chance here. R. T. S. Norwood may be regarded as the best of the known reserve wingmen, and both P. L. Chandler and A. McIntyre are likely to be considered for the centre. Chandler is really a fly-half and a useful man to have in reserve if anything should happen to Cliff Jones.

There is no shortage of good reserve forwards. Both P. R. Bowring and H. P. Davids have been in the running for a couple of seasons, whilst M. Lee, P. W. Seligman, H. K. Roseveare, M. S. Page, I. A. F. Craig and G. M. Braithwaite have all impressed from time to time.

HONGKONG POLO

FIRST ROUND OF
K.O.Y.L.I. CUP

GOOD HARD GAME

The first round of the K.O.Y.L.I. Cup, competition was played on Monday afternoon at the Causeway Bay Polo Ground, when the Norey Parkers beat the Wall Eyes by five goals to four, after extra time.

The game was a good hard galloping one, and the result was in the balance right to the end.

The teams were:
Norey Parkers: Wall Eyes.
Capt. R. C. Allen. Capt. W. J. Penney.
J. M. A. Macdonald. A. Wall.
J. R. Llewellyn. A. M. Meade.

No goals were scored in the first chukka; but the Norey Parkers had the best of the play. Noreworthy went out, Norey Parkers followed up the success when Taylor scored with a neat near-side five hand, after a mole at the goal mouth.

The Wall Eyes then settled down and played better polo. Allen was clearing well with long backhanders and from one of these, Meade passed to Wall, who scored from a difficult angle.

Soon afterwards, Wall got away on his own and scored a good goal from some way out. The score at half-time was two all.

The Wall Eyes were pressing for the greater part of the third chukka. They were awarded a 60-yard hit, which was taken by Wall; but it was stopped after a mix up at the goal mouth.

In the next chukka, Noreworthy went away up the field, his shot was partially cleared, and Taylor scored with a fine backhanders. Play was then even, but Taylor followed up well and scored with an under-the-neck shot, to give the Norey Parkers the lead, (4-3).

The Wall Eyes pressed and Noreworthy did well to clear from the goal mouth, but the ball was eventually hit through by Wall, to make the score four all. This brought the chukka to an end, and five minutes' extra time was ordered.

After some mediocre play, Taylor got away in his own half, shook off the opposition and scored the winning goal.

This afternoon at 5 o'clock the Norey Parkers will play the Civilian in the semi-finals. On Friday, at the Displaying the form that has made him the greatest billiards player of all time, Walter Lindrum (Australia) completely outclassed Joe Davis (England) in the final of the world's billiards championship, now being played here.

At the close of to-day's session, Lindrum, who was 128 behind last night, had secured a lead of 1248. The closing scores were: Lindrum 1248; Davis 2027. Davis was hopelessly out of form. His highest break was 226, but his average was only 24 for each visit to the table.

Lindrum scored at a fast rate. His best breaks were 573, 416, and 100.—Reuter.

BEACH CLUB GIRL

By MABEL McELLIOTT

CHAPTER XXXII

Boots and Denis lunched at an inn hanging over a willow-circled pond where ducks swam lazily in the dappled water. Denis was at his most charming—neither abstracted nor fully interested. He was solicitous for her comfort. But his long, lean brown hands lighted cigarette after cigarette and Boots noticed that he ate little. He seemed thinner; he had a fine-drawn look about his mouth. She had sent him a money order for $10 the week before, her first payment against the debt caused by her illness and Ruse's burial. He spoke of this gently. He hadn't written to acknowledge it, he said, because he'd wanted to see her first. She was not to bother about that until things were better with her. It was simply a loan between friends. "How are you liking the work?" he wanted to know.

She shrugged. No one was to know how dreadful the long days at Lucy's seemed to her. It was all right, she said, a little thing now and then. It was a job; that was all. He gave her a thoughtful look. "I—had something in mind," he said. "Remember Masteron, that publisher chap I talked to you about a year ago?" She remembered. It had been when she was so desperate, so unhappy, not knowing which way to turn. "His firm has an outlet bookshop over on Eighth Street. Nice little place. Copper kettles and spinning wheels, that sort of thing. You know?"

She knew. She remembered passing by, stopping to read the titles on the bright jackets. "Well, the girl—one of the girls, I should say—is leaving in two weeks. She's a southerner. I think she's getting married. They want someone. When I was in Masteron's office the other day he was talking to someone on the telephone about it. I thought of you."

"But," she cried, her heart thudding painfully, happily at the thought, "maybe the job's already been taken. Oh, probably it has!"

It was cruel of Denis to tell her about it too late to do anything about it. Because of course there were always dozens of girls after jobs of the sort. So different from Lucy's with its time clock, and its eternal vigilance, the steady ache in back and feet.

"I don't know. It's a chance anyway. Worth looking into," Denis warmed to the idea. "Look, I'll call you to-morrow—or can I?" "We're not supposed to have telephone calls at the store," she told him. "Can't I call you instead?" "That was all right," Denis said. "She would call him about noon then?" Good.

To-day he was a delightful companion, easy to talk to, interested, amusing. He told lazy stories; excitedly, he flashed his remembered smile at her occasionally; and when the girl, relaxing in the pleasant atmosphere, responded in kind he laughed heartily at her sallies. Boots had never felt so gay, so witty and assured. She gave him brief sketches of some of the people at the store. She was repaid by the deep chuckle with which they were received.

"I don't believe a word of it," he said indolently when she had finished an imitation of Mr. Babcock, the floor manager and his famous monologue about "the business."

"Oh, I assure you!" Boots began, protesting delightedly. The other lunchers had drifted away. They were quite alone now in the big clean room with the square tables. Walters drifted to and fro with trays of shining, empty glasses and someone turned on a radio in an inner room. A nasal tenor wailed the refrain:

"You have to-a-ken my heart... Suddenly all the bright scene revolved kaleidoscopically for the girl. She was dizzy; her palms were wet with the revelation of the moment. There was some angle in the air, something had sprung up between her and this lean, long-legged young man with the narrow dark eyes and the reluctantly won smile.

"Boots," Barbara... he looked toward her, his brown hand capturing her small white one. "Do you know you're most awfully pretty to-day?"

The mists cleared away, the landscape righted itself, and only her heart, pounding, pounding under the thin organs of her blouse, testified to the gladness of the moment. "Really?"

This was nonsense, she reminded herself swiftly and sternly. She was Ruse Lund's widow and Denis was in love with Kay Chillingford. He wasn't in the least interested in her. That speech he had last uttered was the merest pleasantry, the lightest compliment.

Confused, she gathered up her purse and gloves. "We—we really ought to be getting back," she protested, looking vaguely about her. Oh, come, he argued, how about swimming? How about going on down to Easthampton? The Cranes, his cousins, had been asking him to drop in for ages. They had bathhouses simply running over with extra bathing suits.

"I don't know," Boots told him, waveringly. The prospect was enticing. The rest of this golden, breezy afternoon with this man as against a long, lonely evening in her room. Wisdom counselled flight but she was young and inclination won.

She might as well enjoy all this she told herself recklessly as the crisp, sunny day, the shaded, dipping roads where every vista was a delight. To-morrow she would be back among the chintzes, neat in her thin black with the white collar, but tired, faded under her new sun-burn. She might well have had this day to remember.

The Cranes, a long-legged set of youngsters with blazing blue eyes and lantern jaws, variously introduced as Jinny, Kits and Leo, flung themselves upon Denis with enthusiasm. "You brought a girl?" Swell," said Leo, surveying Boots with interest. Jinny and Kits, the twins, announced that Mother was at the Hayfields garden party. Nobody knew why or how she'd got there but somebody must call for her at seven. Menn-time would Boots have a cocktail?

Would somebody get her a bathing suit? She dressed in a big, airy cabana at the water's very edge. The heady tang of salt air was in her nostrils. No cocktail would have affected her like this. It was like wine.

Shyly she came out into the dazzling light. The others were variously disposed. Kits was lying on a canvas cot under a striped red and white umbrella. Leo was agitating a mammoth silver shaker. Denis, already in bathing kit, sat tailor-fashion on a rug at the edge of Kits' cot, conversing with his cousin in low tones. As Boots appeared he jumped to his feet.

"I say!" Leo shouted. "Doesn't she look simply swell?" The white rubber suit with its scarf-like bodice indeed suited the delicious curves of Boots' slim body. She had left her hair free. It was like spun silk in the sunshine.

"First time for me this year," she said, taking the cushion Denis placed for her. She was suddenly almost suffocated with shyness. It was absurd. All her life she had gone unconcernedly about in the briefest of casual swimming garments. Now, with Denis' eyes on her slim rounded shoulders, she felt self-conscious. "Not really?" Kits drawled. "Don't you mind?"

She nodded. Yes, she hadn't realized until this moment how much she had minded being away from all this, the sea, and the white burning sand and the warm sun burning over all.

"Miss being a beach club girl?" She looked up, flushing, into Denis' keen eyes. He was uncanny. He had been reading her very thoughts.

"Oh, I do!" And yet—and yet she wasn't sure she meant it. She missed the ease and warm indolence of the life but she was proud to think she had stood on her own feet this year, without anyone's help or condescension. She had proved, at least, that she wasn't only a beach club girl—a waster—a parasite!

She let the sand slip through her fingers. "Going in?" Denis had her arm. They were racing along the beach. Now they were cleaving the water with their bodies and the strong, remembered tang of salt was on her lips.

The beautiful clean strokes came back to her and she felt again the pure exhilaration of swimming. Oh, it was delicious to be back in her own element of sun and air and glittering sea after this long interlude, with Denis beside her. Then she heard Jinny shout from the water's edge. "Denis! Come along in. Look who's here!"

Boots flung the drops out of her eyes. There, elegant and poised, in floating summer silks, stood Kay Chillingford.

DEMOCRATS CONFIDENT

MODIFIED PLAN OF CAMPAIGN

TAKE HEART FROM PRIMARIES

(Special to "Telegraph").

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic News Service, October 17, 1934, 11 a.m.)

Washington, Oct. 16. The Democratic National Committee has suspended the compilation of the New Deal Emergency Relief Expenditures list for campaign purposes, apparently reflecting the Democratic belief that the November elections are already won, and with votes to spare.

The results of primaries everywhere seem to indicate that the Democrats are still in high favour with the country and where they stand a chance of losing, as against Senator La Follette and Mr. Upton Sinclair, they have tentatively supported these antagonistic candidates and made of them potential allies.—United Press.

LONDON DOCK IMPROVEMENT

SCHEME TO COST
£150,000

London, Oct. 16. A scheme for extensive replanning of the approaches to the vast system of docks in the Port of London is announced by the Ministry of Transport.

London is the biggest and busiest port in the world, and although £16,000,000 has been spent in the last 25 years on its docks, the roads leading to them have not kept pace with these improvements and enlargements.

Under the present scheme, which will cost £150,000, new roads are to be made, existing roads are to be widened and improved, ten bridges are to be reconstructed or eliminated, and a system of viaducts, to

TAKING CROSS TO DEVIL'S ISLAND

Former Prisoner In Role Of Messiah

DREADFUL YEARS IN CONFINEMENT

Paris, Sept. 23.
Ullmo, the man who survived 26 blistering years on Devil's Island, is going back. But not alone; he goes with what he believes to be The Word. He thinks he's the Messiah, the second Christ.

The "affaire Ullmo" was the sensation of France in 1907, when the Dreyfus case began to settle down to the sort of routine which belongs to-day to the Slavsky scandal.

M. Benjamin Charles Ullmo, 26-year-old naval ensign, scion of a respected Lyons family, was trapped as the writer of a letter offering to sell back French military secrets which had come into his possession. If they were not sought back, according to the letter, they would be sold to a foreign power.

Ullmo admitted he had succumbed to temptation for the sake of a Toulon beauty, one Lison Welch—"La Belle Lison". Having spent on her his personal fortune, which was considerable, he had risked dishonour to keep her affection, and lost.

The young naval officer was sentenced to life banishment and sailed for Guyana July 17, 1908. Until 1923, or for fifteen years, he lived alone on a rock surrounded by shark-infested waters. The only men he saw were the guards who visited him twice a week. Dreyfus himself was the only other man to have suffered such a fate.

WORK ON MAINLAND.

The government relenting in 1923, Ullmo was allowed to go on the mainland, where he hired out to a local industrialist. Guyana Prisoners often are authorized to work for planters or miners, earning thus a pittance which makes life for them more tolerable.

All the time, though he did not know it, several persons were working in France for his pardon. Outstanding among these was Madeleine Madeline Poirier, a Paris nurse, with whom eventually he had a voluminous correspondence.

The pardon finally came and Ullmo arrived in Paris on July 4, 1934. Ullmo gazed with interest but without excitement on the changes which a quarter of a century had produced in his homeland. He soon left Paris for a beach near Ostend.

Fifteen years of solitary confinement and twenty-six of broiling in the "land of the damned" had left an indelible mark on the spirit of this man who had thrown his life away in a moment of folly. He brooded in the Channel mist.

HEAR "THE CALL"

"The call" came a few weeks after Ullmo's return. A newspaperman who had been among those who worked for his pardon went to see him and returned to Paris with the extraordinary revelation.

"I am going back to Guyana in the fall," Ullmo said. "I am going to bring salvation to those who are there expiating their earthly sins."

Questioning brought out Ullmo's conviction that he is the Messiah. "Nineteen centuries have elapsed since the tragedy of Mount Olivet," he said. "That is the first sign. The Pope realized the knell had rung when he ordered the Holy Year of 1933. The Scripture says the Chosen One shall be son of David and a member of the tribe of Judas."

"My father's name was David. How can I prove that I come down from Judas? By the double treason, first to my faith, being an Israelite professing in the Roman Church, and second to my country."—United Press.

DIET FOR AN INVALID

A person who is suffering from a sore throat, or who is recovering from an operation for the removal of tonsils, or who has had many teeth extracted, has to have food that is nourishing and very easily swallowed and digested.

Bread and milk, milky foods, beef tea, egg beaten up in milk, are ideas that at once occur to the mind. One wants to vary these items, and soups are good, and minced chicken or meat, vegetable purees, meat jellies, custards, junkets, milk puddings, etc., are other suggestions. Potato soup should have the potatoes thoroughly mashed. Onion soup should have the onions passed through a sieve; it is a good way of serving cheese, too, and thus providing protein, for grated cheese should accompany onion soup.

Mutton broth could be well simmered and then strained. To get as much nourishment as possible into the liquid, always simmer soup instead of boiling, and thus draw all possible good out of peas, beans, carrots, barley, sago, macaroni, or meat.

Baked custard should be varied. Make it savoury by adding a little meat extract, a small quantity of pounded fish, a little sieved tomato pulp, or some minced parsley and mint. When it is served sweet after the flavouring—cinnamon, nutmeg, vanilla, a little extra-strong coffee, a little pineapple juice, some grated chocolate, and a little brandy. Blancmange and junket can be served with mashed apples, prunes, or jelly. Prune jelly is excellent. Get the patient to take cream whenever possible, as it is pure nourishment.

MYSTERIOUS GAS "ATTACK"

VILLAGERS SUFFER ILL EFFECTS

The inhabitants of Willabridge, near Bilton, Gloucestershire, dispatched a petition to the Ministry of Health regarding the chlorine gas fumes which have invaded many of their houses.

Mr. J. G. Ashley told a reporter of the effects of the fumes in his house. "The paint on my doors and windows is changing colour. Green paint is going grey, and cream paint is going black," he said.

"At night, when the air is still, the fumes are almost overpowering, and I have to get up and gargle my throat. Other members of my household are complaining

GERMAN FACTORIES FOR BRITAIN

WOMEN'S GOWNS AND OVERCOATS

RESTRICTION OF IMPORTS

Plans are nearly complete for 18 German firms, engaged in the making-up of women's gowns and coats, to establish branch factories in England. Nine factories will be situated in the City and West-End areas of London, and nine in the Manchester district. Work in some of the factories will begin this month, the precise dates being partly determined by seasonal requirements.

One firm has already set up its branch headquarters in Regent Street, W., and certain others have obtained premises elsewhere in London or Manchester. Negotiations are now proceeding on behalf of the remainder for the acquisition of suitable buildings. The assistance of the Manchester Development Committee has been sought in relation to sites in that city. Although the negotiations are being carried on more or less simultaneously and through one channel, each branch will retain its separate identity.

A number of limited companies have already been formed in this country by the parent firms. They are not being financed here or from Germany. Each concern has received permission from the German Government to send over from Germany goods to the value of 20,000 marks. That Government has also laid down various conditions regarding the financing and management of the branches designed to safeguard German interests concerning the amounts of German raw materials used, the effect on German employment, and in other directions.

IMPORT RESTRICTION.

The opening of these factories is stated to have been decided on partly in consequence of the import restrictions now existing in relation to the British and other markets. It is intended to make-up certain special classes of goods with varying styles for each particular market, and of a kind hitherto produced only in Germany. The eighteen firms, all of which have their headquarters in Berlin, are in the aggregate responsible for a huge export business in made-up clothing. It is not intended to manufacture textiles here, but to confine operations solely to the making-up side of the industry.

Each branch will, in addition to workshops and other accommodation, have a large showroom for the use of wholesale buyers. All the machinery will be purchased in Great Britain, and Lancashire and Yorkshire textiles will be largely used. Certain kinds of material not obtainable in this country will be imported from Germany or elsewhere.

It is expected that, when the initial stages have been completed, the factories will provide increased employment among garment workers. Official permission has been granted for a number of German "key" workers to enter England for a limited period to train local employees, as the latter will be engaged on unfamiliar operations in which skill is required.

of irritation of the throat and eyes.

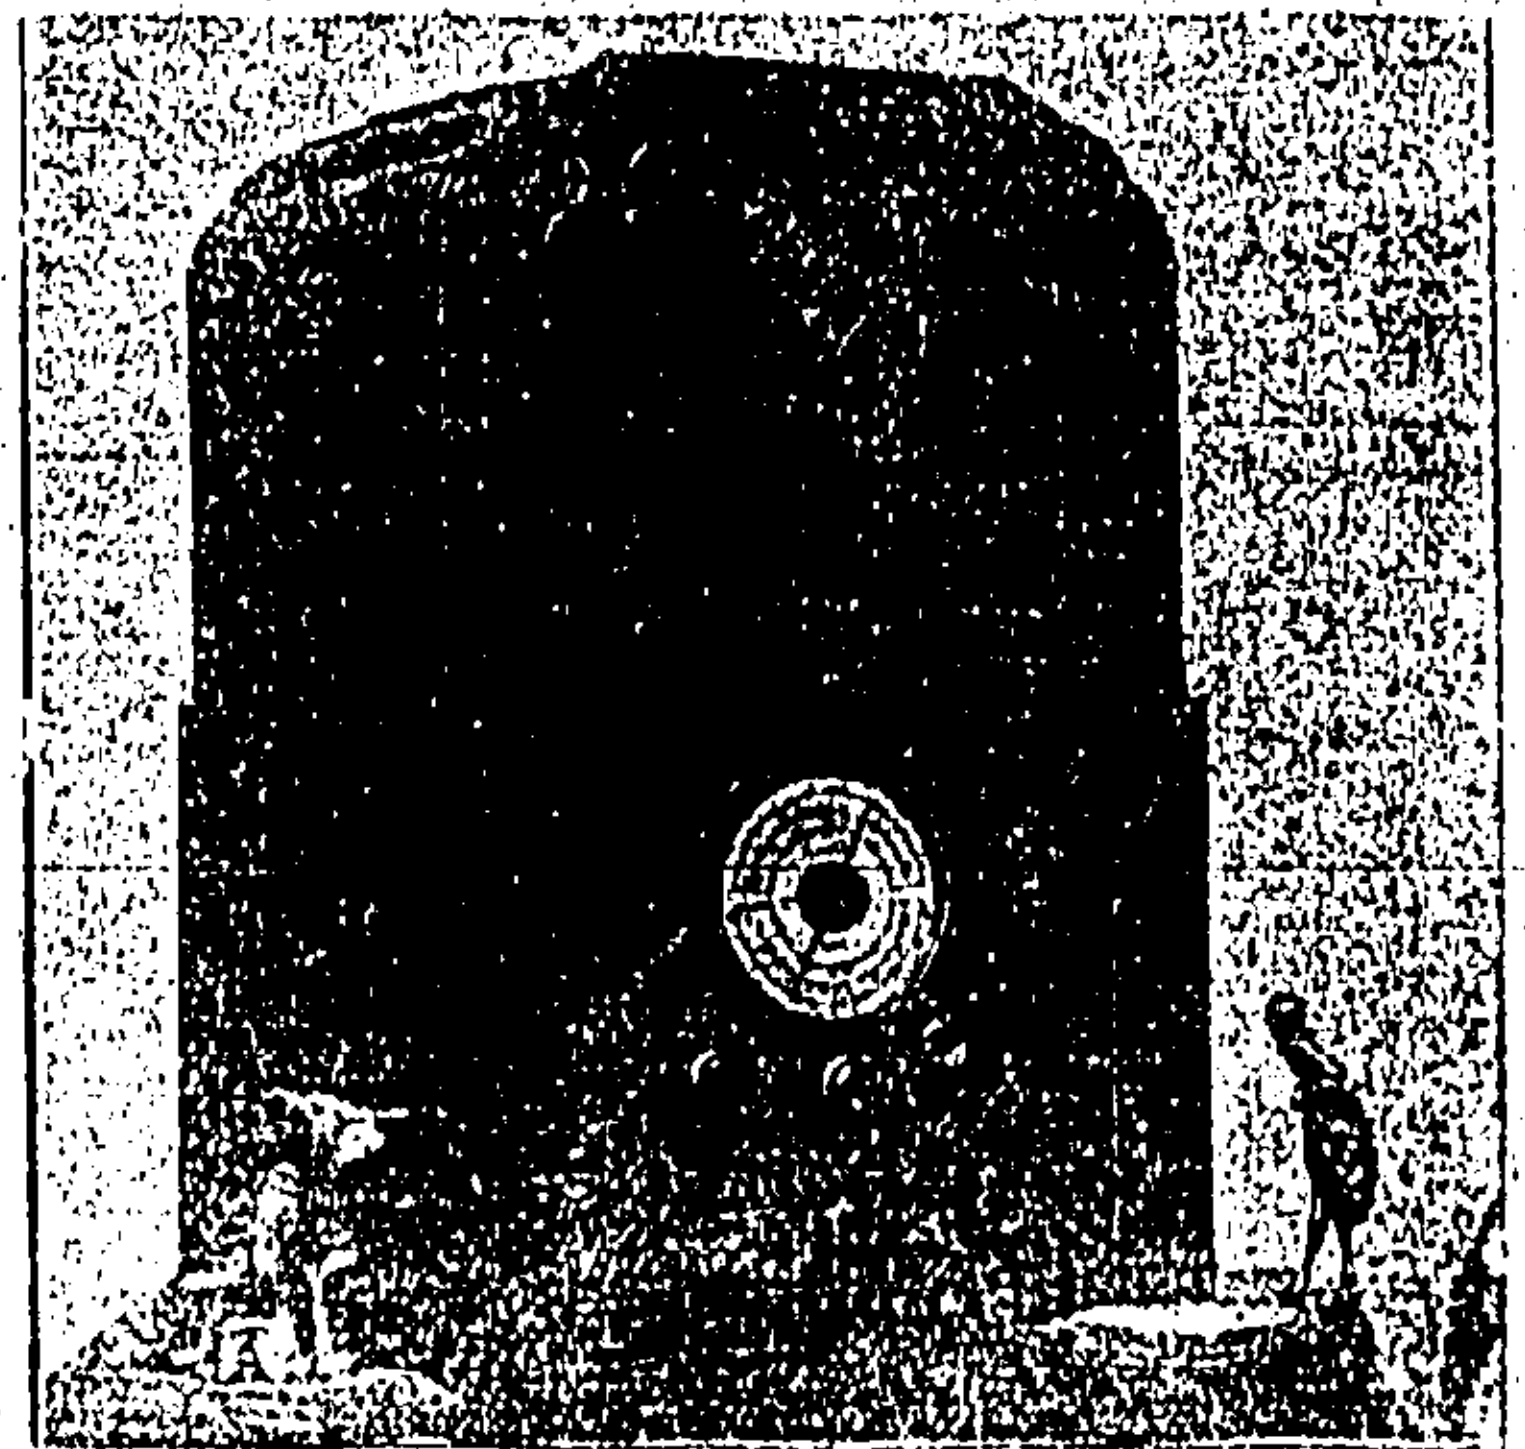

Similar conditions obtain in many other houses in the village.

Mr. Ashley attributes the fumes to sprinklings of chloride of lime in the Willabridge Brook, but the Sanitary Inspector, Captain W. H. Knee, states that as far as he knows no chloride of lime has been put into the brook.

Dr. T. Aubrey, the local medical officer, is also puzzled as to the origin of the gas. "There is no doubt," he said, "that this is chlorine gas."

BRITISH SPEEDBOAT SETS WORLD'S RECORD

SCOTT PAINE'S HEROIC RETIRING ACHIEVEMENT IN ITALY

A new world's record was established by Mr. Hubert Scott Paine, when he drove Miss Britain III. at an average speed of 177.185 k.p.h. (approximately 111 m.p.h.) over a measured mile at Venice.

This easily beats the late Sir Henry Segrave's speed of 92.68 m.p.h. and also beats Mr. Scott Paine's unofficial record of 102 m.p.h. established at Southampton last year.

Mr. Scott Paine actually covered the outward mile at a speed of 178.811 k.p.h. (approximately 112 m.p.h.), but he was slower coming back, his average being 176.660 k.p.h. (approximately 110 m.p.h.).

By having a mean average of 177.185 k.p.h. (approximately 111 m.p.h.) over the measured mile, Mr. Scott Paine broke the world's speed record for salt water, the world's single-engined boat record, the European sea mile record, and the Italian sea mile record. These records were previously held by the late Sir Henry Segrave with a speed of 92.68 m.p.h.

Mr. Scott Paine had a narrow escape from disaster when a seaplane landed across his bows.

TAKEN TO HOSPITAL

Struggling like a bullet across the water at 110 m.p.h., the wash of the seaplane struck Miss Britain as a hard ridge. She jumped four times into the air, and it was only a miracle that the boat did not break her back or overturn.

"If the boat had not been so strongly built," said her driver, "those jumps would have broken her back."

The spray almost blinded Mr. Scott Paine and his mechanic, Gordon Thomas, but the former suffered a more severe discomfiture. Each time the driving seat forced its way against the small of his back at the exact spot where it had received such a buffeting in the Harmsworth Trophy races last year. So great was the pain that the British driver was, all but obliged to break off the attempt, but he pluckily stuck to it and thus gave his country more records and fresh prestige. He would, indeed, have made a further attempt had it not been for

made in 1929.

Only one record did Mr. Paine fail to beat, and that was the Volti Trophy lap record of 124.625 k.p.h. (approx. 77.26 m.p.h.), set up in 1929 by Sir Henry Segrave.

Mr. Scott Paine's feat is all the more remarkable in that Miss Britain's engine is five years old and Mr. Scott Paine did not think he had sufficient room prior to the start to average over 100 miles an hour.

When one considers that the world record of 124.625 k.p.h., established by Commander Garfield Wood, of America, was made with Miss America, a four-engined boat of 8,000 h.p., and that Miss Britain, with her single engine, is only of 1,375 h.p., one can readily see what a magnificent effort Mr. Scott Paine's was.

HIS LAST RACE.

"This was my last race," said the British speed-boat racer. "I have definitely decided to retire from the game. I am, therefore, especially glad to have set up these new records, in particular the world's speed record for salt water. If our heritage means anything to us, the salt water record is surely the one which should be of particular importance to us."

"My object has been to show that we can use a petrol engine and drive a boat with a better performance than anybody else. And I think I have proved this. I want to see, however, more attention given to motor boat racing in England. We have concentrated on the air and land records, but have neglected sea records, which, seeing that we are a sea-going nation, is not good for our national prestige."

Mr. Scott Paine was the designer of Miss England II, the boat in which Sir Henry Segrave established what was then the world's water speed record, and he himself he raced against Gar Wood, the American, who holds the present speed record, at 124 miles an hour, in an effort to regain the Harmsworth Trophy.

At Detroit a year ago, in the second heat of the Trophy contest, Mr. Scott Paine was beaten by only 22 seconds by Gar Wood's craft, the engines of which developed seven times more power than the British boat.

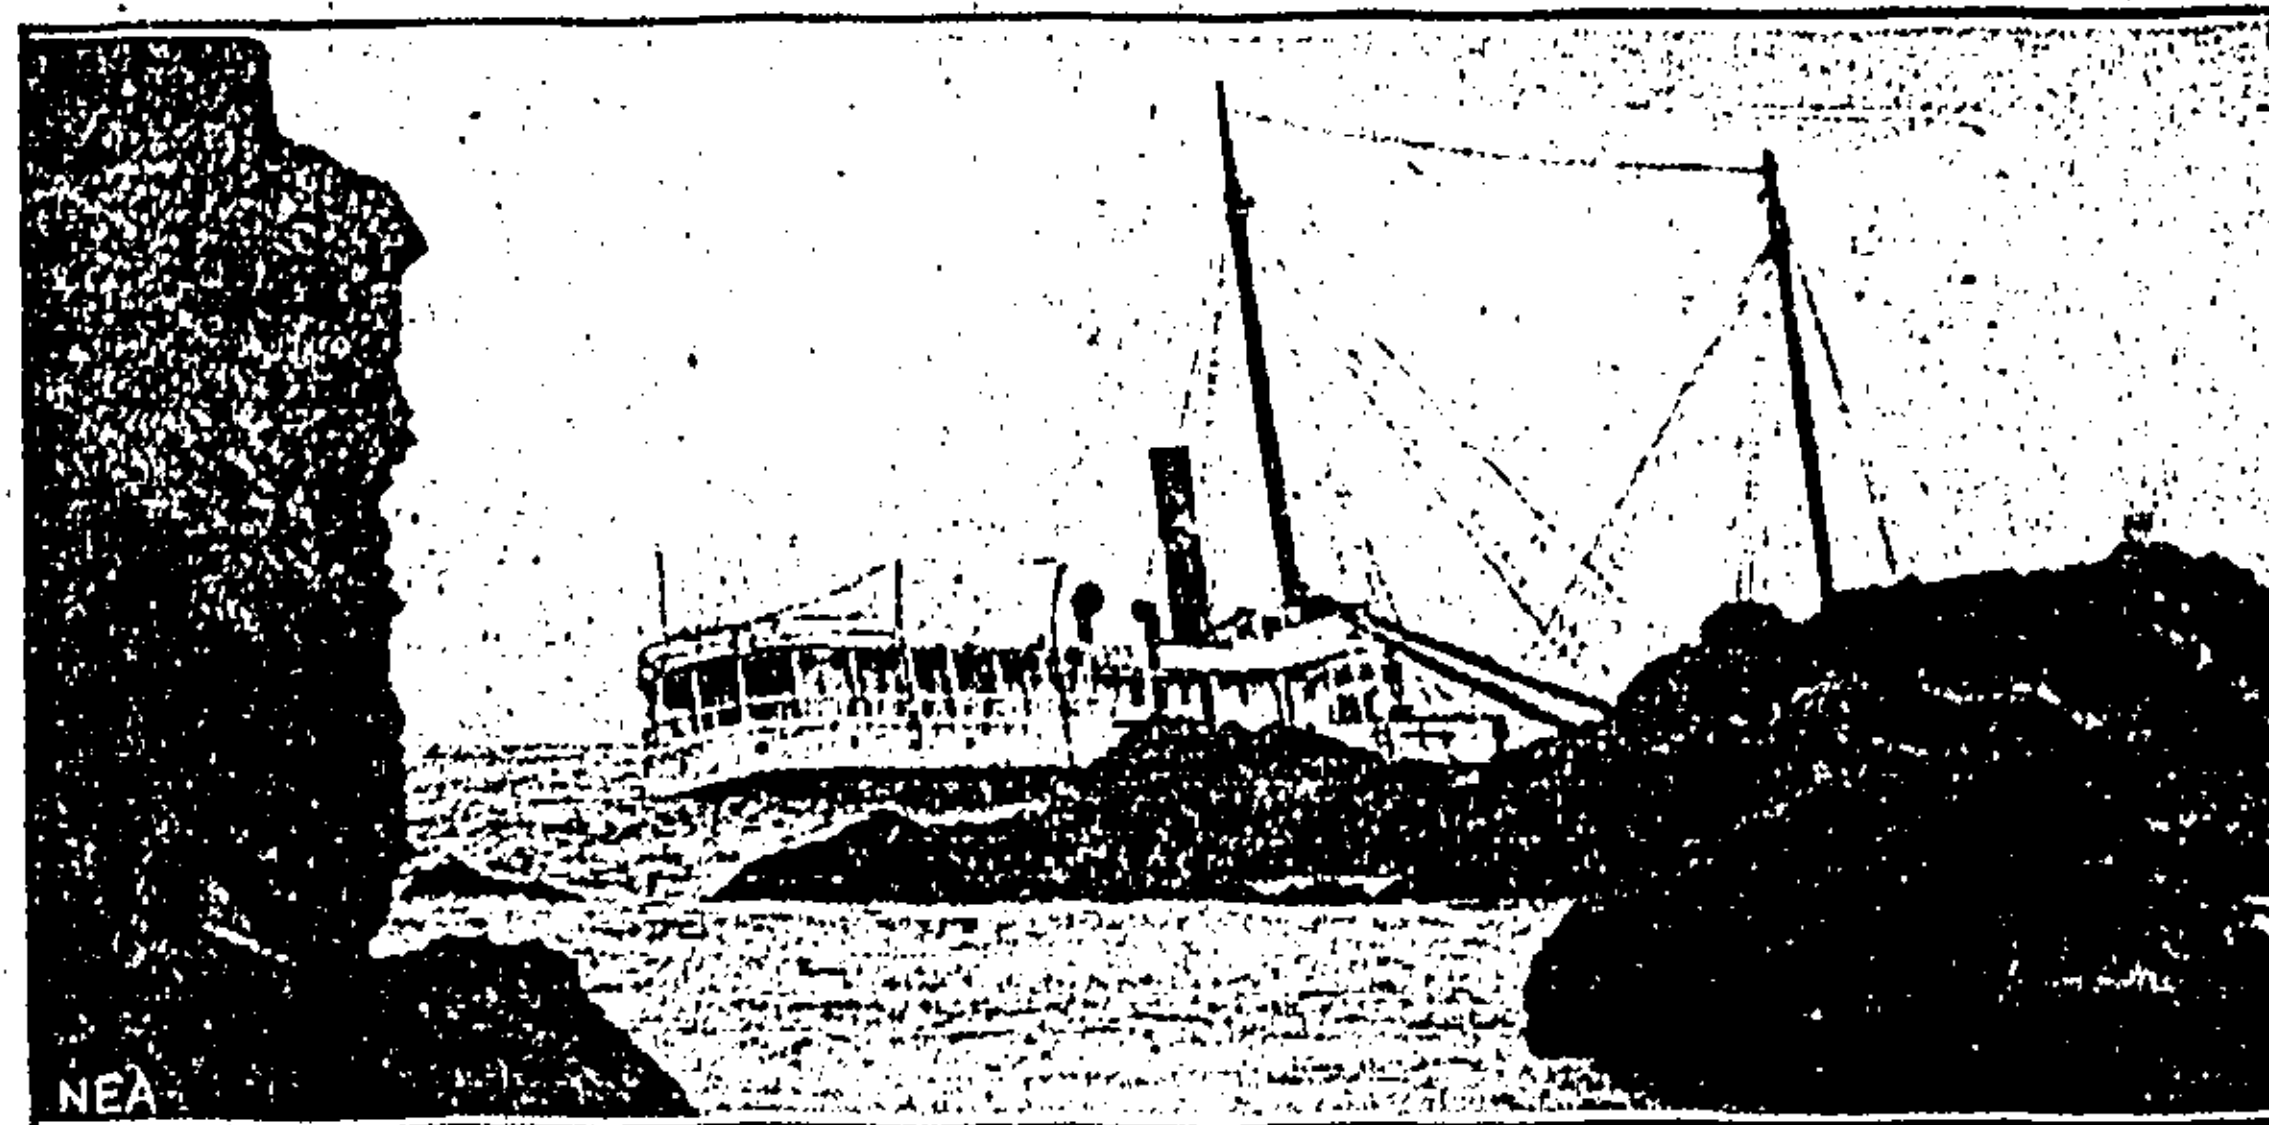

Mr. Max Reinhardt, famous theatrical producer, is to give America "A Midsummer Night's Dream." He is shown here with Miss Shearer, screen actress.

GRAIN LAND NOW DESERT PLAN TO DIVERT RIVER CANADA'S GRAVE PROBLEM

Ottawa, Oct. 1.

The reclamation of millions of acres of what was formerly the world's finest wheat land, now a desert of dry, powdery, windblown

The battered lumber schooner J. B. Statton, shown hard aground on a rocky reef off the Monterey county, California, coast. The vessel crashed in a dense fog and was abandoned after a hopeless fight to free it from jagged rocks. A crew of 21 men was brought ashore by Coast Guards.

soil, is engaging the attention of the experts of the Dominion Government, and of the Governments of the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta.

Sixty per cent. of Saskatchewan's vast cultivated area has been dried out, and 40 per cent. will not produce a marketable crop this year. In thirteen municipalities in Southern Manitoba a million acres has been drought-stricken. The dry area in Alberta exceeds 2,000,000 acres.

In some districts there has been no real rain for five years. There are horses and cattle who have never felt the patten of the rain on their backs or munched away at rain-washed pasture. The plagues of grasshoppers have denuded great expanses of country. Russian thistle, spreading north from the United States (whence the grasshoppers also migrated) were cursed as weeds and now provide the only feed for cattle in many districts.

The humus has gone from the soil and the problem is to restore it and provide some binder that will hold the soil together. Attempts to restore it to its prairie state, suitable for ranching, have failed: the grasses cannot catch. Proposals for reforestation and afforestation have met with the fundamental need of the trees themselves for moisture. The poplar bluffs which dot the prairies are dying off, and the sloughs, with their frog-inhabited waters, have dried up.

Plans have been made to relieve distress and feed the impoverished farmers, provide seed for next year's problematical crops, and care for millions of half-starved cattle. Farmers who five years ago were prosperous are now on relief. One striking proposal is that the waters of the South Saskatchewan river be diverted to the dried watercourses of the south. The northern areas, well treed, are bountifully supplied with rivers and lakes.

NEW ZEALAND TO BENEFIT AUSTRALIA LOSING ENGLAND MARKET

QUARREL OVER TARIFFS

Manchester, Sept. 23.

Long-suffering Lancashire has at last exploded with indignation—the cause being the discovery that the Commonwealth of Australia, in disregard of the spirit of the Ottawa Agreements, proposes to erect a prohibitive tariff against Lancashire's cotton goods.

Feeling in Lancashire has run so high at this unexpected blow from one of the Dominions that many are urging a "boycott" of Australian dairy products. Unless the offending clauses are withdrawn, the association of growers in the mill town of Bolton have already agreed to handle no Australian produce until the tariff is withdrawn. This movement is spreading.

The cotton mills themselves have taken no part in the proposed "boycott" but they have sent an influential deputation to the Board of Trade in London and to the Australian High Commissioner.

Exports to Australia are vital to the trade in cotton piece goods. During the six months ending June 30, exports to that Dominion, at £1,785,662, ranked second only to the exports to the vast population of India, at £3,780,441. Argentina came third as a customer, with £1,498,128.

TARIFF DEMANDED.

But Australia has a lusty "infant industry" which demands a tariff

To raise the treasure aboard the "Lutine" which sank 113 years ago, this weird gear has been built.

3,000 and 12,000 bales of cotton per annum.

But this combination of mills and growers has the ear of the Australian Labour Party. The argument submitted to the Tariff Commission was to the effect that if Australia went no further than Canada and provided for only two-thirds of its consumption, Queensland could market at home 200,000 bales of cotton, employing 20,000 farmers and 35,000 pickers.

This view appears to have carried the day, and the tariffs on certain lines which the four mills produce have been increased 100 per cent.

Perhaps the most serious aspect of the situation is its repercussion upon the relations between the Mother Country and the Dominion, especially during the forthcoming Imperial Conference. New Zealand, in its anxiety to sell its dairy a tug which crossed his course. It was obviously impossible and dangerous in the extreme to attempt higher speeds with so much other craft on the water.

After his race, Mr. Scott Paine, who was in agony from his injury, was examined by a doctor on the spot, and later taken to a hospital, where he was X-rayed. No lasting damage has been done, and while he is still uncomfortable, he will be all right again in a few days.

"CONTINUALLY OBSTRUCTED"

"I think I could have done 115 m.p.h.," said Mr. Scott Paine, "had the racing conditions been ideal. But not only was I continually obstructed and on occasion had to cut off the engine, which lost me several miles, but I did not get as much room for my dash to the start as I should have liked, although it was not as bad as I expected."

Few people had the privilege of watching the British racer break his records, as he purposely kept his attempt secret.

Not only did Mr. Scott Paine break the records but he won the Prince of Piedmont's trophy for the best speed over the measured mile. He also broke another record when he won the Count Volpi Challenge Trophy, for he beat the late Sir Henry Segrave's record for the Volpi Trophy course with an average speed of 115.147 k.p.h. (approx. 71.96 m.p.h.). Sir Henry Segrave's record was 112.218 k.p.h.

MURDERED HIS SON

SENTENCED TO DEATH

SORDID CASE IN LONDON

Sentence of death was passed by Mr. Justice Atkinson at the Old Bailey, London, on Thomas Joseph Davidson (34), a poultry breeder, for the murder of his son, whose body could not be found.

"There is no doubt," the Judge said in his summing-up, "that this boy died while he was in the sole custody of the prisoner. No one else knows what happened."

After an absence of a quarter of an hour the jury found Davidson guilty. They recommended him to mercy on account of the condition of his mind at the time the crime was committed.

Asked if he had anything to say, Davidson replied firmly, "No, sir."

Mr. Justice Atkinson, passing sentence of death, said that the recommendation to mercy would be sent to the proper quarter, together with any extenuating circumstances there might be in the case.

Davidson showed no emotion, but stood erect as sentence was passed. He seemed as if about to say something, but the warder tapped him on the shoulder and he left the dock.

Mrs. Davidson was not present in Court, and was told of the verdict in the hall outside by a friend.

Davidson had pleaded not guilty to the murder of his eight-year-old son, John Desmond Davidson, and the prosecution alleged that after the boy disappeared from Hanwell, Middlesex, in December last, the father made repeated statements that he had killed him and put him on a burning refuse dump. If he had done that the body would have completely disappeared.

It was stated that he had not been on good terms with his wife and had made repeated efforts to get her back with him. In an alleged statement he said that when he failed to get her back he had no further interest in life, took the boy to a canal, and jumped in with him. When he got out he found that the boy was dead and took him to the dump. Later when he went back for the body it had been covered and he could not find it.

COLOURFUL SCENE AT STONE-LAYING

I prefer to take a different view. China and Hongkong were the last places to feel the full force of the world wide depression. Conditions elsewhere are now slowly but surely showing signs of recovery and the Far East should in due course participate in the general improvement. There is no organization better equipped to meet the trade requirements of China than "Wayfoong," thanks to the very cordial relations that exist between the Bank and its British, foreign and Chinese constituents.

The Corporation has been singularly fortunate in its choice of Chief Managers and Executive Staff who have been responsible for carrying it successfully through good times and bad, and who have brought it to-day to the forefront of the great banking institutions of the world.

TRIBUTE TO MR. GRAYBURN.

Perhaps on Mr. Grayburn has fallen the heaviest burden of all but the Directors have the fullest confidence in his ability and judgment and feel sure that the Bank will emerge from the present depression stronger than ever. (Applause)

This gathering to-day affords me the opportunity of expressing on behalf of the Directors their keen appreciation of the very excellent services rendered to the Bank by our Manager, Mr. L. N. Murphy, who is leaving the Colony on retirement two days' hence. We trust that he will be long spared to enjoy his well-earned leisure and to him and Mrs. Murphy we offer all good wishes for the future.

Before calling upon His Excellency the Governor to see that the Stone is well and truly laid I hope Lady Peel will be good enough to place the basket containing present day records of Hongkong in the niche provided for it.

TROWEL PRESENTED.

A silver trowel was then presented to His Excellency by Mr. G. L. Wilson, representing the architects, Messrs. Palmer and Turner. The trowel was inscribed:—"With this trowel was laid the Foundation Stone of the new Head Office of the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation by His Excellency the Governor, Sir William Peel, K.C.M.G., K.B.E., Governor of Hongkong, 17th October, 1934."

At the invitation of the Chairman of the Court of Directors, Lady Peel then placed a basket containing coins and notes of different denomination issued by the Bank, and copies of Hongkong newspapers containing articles on the construction and history of the Bank, into a crevice beneath the stone.

With the silver trowel His Excellency then laid the foundation stone and declared it "well and truly laid" after it had been inspected by H. E. the G.O.C. and the Colonial Secretary, Sir Thomas Southern.

HIS EXCELLENCY'S SPEECH.

Addressing the gathering His Excellency said:—"Mr. Mackie, Your Excellency, Ladies and Gentlemen—I regard it a very great privilege to have laid to-day the foundation stone of the new Head Office of the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation. It is a privilege of which I could never have dreamed when I first became a humble depositor in the Bank nearly 37 years ago in Penang. I have been connected with the Bank in various places and shall probably continue to be a client for the rest of my days. However, my personal association is of little moment and I apologise for even referring to it.

I congratulate the Directors on their enterprise in building this new Head Office in Hongkong. In these days of dark depression it should help to instill a measure of confidence and foster the feeling that things are not perhaps so bad as is alleged. Further it affords evidence, if evidence be necessary, of the strength and the stability of the Corporation. I say advisedly "if such evidence be necessary," for there can be no doubt that the Bank has stood the test of a long period of time.

FINE RECORD.

Since the Bank opened on the January 1, 1865, it has had a fine record. It is true that in the years 1874 and 1875 the trade position was bad and dividends were passed but with the appointment of new Chief Manager, Sir Thomas Jackson, the position improved and since then the Corporation has been uniformly prosperous. Its history may be said to have been interwoven with that of the Colony and in a large measure with that of the Far East. One of my predecessors, Sir Arthur Kennedy, said in the year 1872 "The most flourishing Corporation in Hongkong, the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, has acted like a thermometer indicating the periodic condition of the atmosphere of Hongkong." That is still true to-day.

For many years the Bank has undoubtedly added to British prestige and has enjoyed the confidence not only of both the local and home Governments but also of foreign governments especially that of China. It has stood high in the estimation of the latter who in contracting with it in December 1874 for a loan of £600,000 at 8 per cent. readily agreed to the whole revenues of the Imperial Maritime Customs being regarded as security for such loan.

I would add that the Government of this Colony is greatly indebted to the Bank for much advice and help. (Applause)

UNIQUE POSITION.

The post of the Chief Manager of the Corporation is almost unique. There is no doubt that he wields very great power—it has been suggested indeed in certain quarters that perhaps his power is too great to be vested in one individual. Be that as it may, there is no doubt that the position demands a man of broad views, courage and ability. The Bank has generally speaking been most fortunate in the holders of the appointment. It is perhaps invidious to mention any particular names, but I think I may be permitted to refer in particular to two very notable holders—Sir Thomas Jackson whose statue looks benevolently down on this ceremony to-day, and Sir Newton Stubb whose death a few years ago while he was still in harness constituted a serious loss to the Bank. In the present holder of the post, Mr. Grayburn, we have an able successor to past holders. Since he assumed the duties of the appointment about four and a half years ago he has had very difficult problems to contend with and he has shown great ability and courage in dealing with them, and the Colony is indebted to him for his able handling of such problem especially that of currency. (Applause).

IMPRESSIVE BUILDING.

I congratulate the architects of this new building. We cannot yet see on the site itself its ultimate form but I and no doubt many of you here have seen the model and will agree that it will prove a notable addition to the architecture of this Colony. This may possibly be deemed to be damming it with faint praise as architecture in Hongkong might almost be described as deplorable. It is pleasing therefore to think that we are going to have a building as impressive as this promises to be. (Applause)

I also congratulate the engineers on the efficient way in which they are carrying out the contract. I understand that they have had considerable difficulties to contend with but have been able to surmount them. Meanwhile they may be said to afford us a flavour of the old country for there are times when one might from the noise imagine oneself to be in one of the busy industrial centres in the North of England. I realize however that this is unavoidable if the work is to be carried out expeditiously and that for a time all events this locality must be excluded from any possible "zones of silence."

In conclusion on behalf of all present I take the opportunity of this ceremony to-day to wish the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation continued prosperity. (Applause)

MR. GRAYBURN'S THANKS.

Returning thanks to His Excellency on behalf of the Corporation the General Manager, Mr. V. M. Grayburn said:—"Your Excellencies, Ladies and Gentlemen—I have to thank Your Excellency for honouring us to-day by laying the foundation stone of our new Building. It is nearly four years ago since I approached Your Excellency with regard to the purchase of part of this site, and negotiations were made easy by your enthusiasm over the proposition which you have since enlarged upon and Hongkong will one day see and profit by your foresight. It is fitting therefore that you should lay the foundation stone to-day, and it is our earnest wish that you will be here next year to open the new Building in the birth of which you played no small part. Your Excellency, I thank you on behalf of us all, shareholders and staff. I will now ask our eldest

MOTOR MIX-UP ON MAINLAND

EUROPEAN FINED ON TWO COUNTS

Mr. D'Oby appeared for his son before Mr. D. M. MacDougall, at the District Office South, this morning, on charges of driving car No. 1006 on September 30 in a manner dangerous to the public, and failing to report a collision which took place the same day on the Castle Peak Road. He pleaded guilty and was fined $15 on the charge of dangerous driving and $2 for failing to report the accident.

Inspector A. Nicoll, in giving an outline of the case, said that on the evening of September 30, Mr. Jeffreys, of the Hongkong Telephone Co., was driving private car No. 7246, owned by the Far East Motors, from Castle Peak in the direction of Kowloon. When ascending the hill from Kwai Chung, and about half way up a fairly sharp bend, private car No. 1006, driven by D'Oby, Jr., attempted to overtake and pass Mr. Jeffreys' car. The driver sounded his horn. Whilst the two cars were in this position, private car No. 249, driven by Mr. H. M. Findlay, suddenly appeared from the opposite direction and, to avoid a head-on collision with car No. 1006, Mr. Findlay applied his brakes and stopped almost dead. Mr. Findlay was driving on his left side.

D'Oby, Jr., also made an attempt to avoid colliding with Mr. Findlay's car, swerved to his left and collided with the off-side front mud-guard of Mr. Jeffreys' car. There were six passengers including Mr. Jeffreys in his car. Mr. Jeffreys informed Mr. MacDougall that D'Oby, Jr., must have been overtaking his car at about 30 m.p.h.

"The accident," he continued, "occurred about 6.30 p.m., almost dusk. Mr. Findlay's car had its lights on, otherwise I would not have been able to see and there would have been another accident."

Mr. D'Oby, who had been travelling in car No. 1006 at the time of the accident, said his son tried to pass the three cars in front as they were going too slowly. Mr. D'Oby hardly felt the bump against Mr. Jeffreys' car and, as there were no marks on his car, he thought nothing of the accident and, therefore, did not make a report to the police. Mr. Jeffreys: I had to shout to D'Oby, Jr., to get him to keep back. Inspector Nicoll said that D'Oby, Jr., had been driving since December 21, 1933, and had a clear record.

Mr. MacDougall fined D'Oby $15 for dangerous driving and, as the other charge was not so serious, imposed a nominal fine of $2. To Mr. D'Oby he said: "However slight an accident there is, you must report it at once to the police."

STREET SLEEPERS' APPEAL

The appeal which has been launched for a minimum sum of four thousand dollars to permit of the expansion of the work of the Street Sleepers' Shelter Society is one which should meet with a ready response. It is not too much to say that this Society is discharging one of the most humane and essential pieces of social work ever undertaken by any organisation in the Colony. Until it began its self-imposed task, it was a standing reproach to the whole Colony that night after night, during the cold winter weather, hundreds of poor people should be found huddled up on pavements and such other spots as they could find in which to pass the hours of sleep. For many years, with each successive cold season, the plight of these unfortunates was the subject of passing comment, but the difficulties of dealing with the problem which they presented were so magnified as to result in general acceptance of the viewpoint that nothing could really be done in the matter. Thanks, however, to a few ardent souls who refused to be discouraged by the admitted obstacles, a start was eventually made by adaptation of the old St. Peter's Church as headquarters, and the experience thus gained has proved once and for all that the problem can be tackled with a large measure of success. The Society admits quite frankly that it has so far been able to touch only the fringe of the question, but it has been so encouraged by the results already obtained that it has laid plans for the provision of another shelter in a locality in which a census has shown that there are usually over five hundred street sleepers nightly. But this is only part of its scheme. The eventual hope is to establish shelters in various other districts, until the time comes when street-sleeping will be a thing of the past. A point which needs stressing is that these people, who are being given needed shelter in clean and comfortable surroundings, are genuine residents of the Colony for the greater part. They are mostly unemployed, either through old age or inability to get work, and are most appreciative of what is being done for them. The old bogey that the opening of such institutions would attract no-er-do-wells from places outside the Colony has been shown to be only a bogey, a fact which is demonstrated by the enquiries made from Canton and Swatow as to how the shelters are worked, so that similar institutions may be

NOTES OF THE DAY

ANOTHER SCARE

Vienna has had another scare. It was learned by intercepting Communist plotters' messages, that a putsch was being planned, and troops and police were hastily sent to vantage points in the city, armed with machine-guns. The authorities are taking no chances. And no wonder! Austria has had two civil wars within the year and two more embryo rebellions have been nipped. With the tension between Yugoslavia and Hungary developing, following the assassination of King Alexander, and the rivalries of other powers in the Balkans, the statesmen in Vienna are not always easy in their minds. With Dr. Kurt Schuschnigg as Chancellor and his skilful diplomacy, and Prince von Starhemberg as chief of the Heimwehr and ready to meet trouble with a most unpleasant remedy, Austria should be able to keep her house in order, and there is little likelihood of danger arising from that point as it did during the Nazi revolt in July.

ANOTHER STORY

Between Yugoslavia and Hungary, however, relations are strained. Yugoslavia's warlike people are in no mood for argument. They have just lost a king whom most admired and respected, of whatever party they might be, and they have laid the blame—with some justice—at Hungary's door. They declare that the terrorists who plotted the assassination of King Alexander sheltered on Hungarian soil, and in this they are correct. But the charge that the terrorists' activities were tolerated and winked at by the Hungarian Government is another matter. That has yet to be proved. It is to be hoped that the response to the belated protest to Budapest will be of the variety that "turneth away wrath."

A POET

That imagination and the mathematical mind may be co-existent in a single brain has been recalled by the erection recently of a canopy over the tomb of Omar Khayyam, at Nishapur, Persia. English-speaking people are familiar with this duality in the case of "Lewis Carroll," author of "Alice in Wonderland," and Rev. C. L. Dodgson, for many years a mathematical lecturer at Oxford and writer of mathematical works. They are one and the same personality. Dodgson's "Euclid and His Modern Rivals," his most noted book, is the obverse side of the whimsical romances of the whole "Alice" series. The Persian poet, whose fatalism has been made so attractive in Fitzgerald's beautiful lines, was also a mathematician. Like Dodgson, he knew his Euclid. Indeed he was one of the most prominent of mathematicians of his age, and blazed the way to the modern union of analysis and geometry by his classification and systematic study of equations. From the brain that was full of conics, cubics, quadratics, biquadratics and the like, came the compelling thought:

The moving finger writes; and having writ
Moves on. Not all your piety
Nor wit
Can lure it back to cancel half a line,
Nor can your tears wipe out a word of it.

AND MATHEMATICIAN

It is one of the ironies of literature that Omar's countrymen, probably because of clerical influence which considered him a heretic, have long forgotten his verse, while remembering his mathematical and astronomical researches. When the late Sir Mortimer Durand, according to The Manchester Guardian, asked Shah Naaz ed Din whether something could not be done to repair Omar's grave, the monarch laughed and said: "Do you mean to tell me that there is a society in England connected with Omar Khayyam? Why, he has been dead a thousand years. Besides, we have better poets than Omar." Englishmen, however, who may not know the Persian scientist love the music of the "lent-maker's" verse. They may have never heard of Dodgson the mathematician but have taken to their heart Lewis Carroll, the dreamer.

provided in these cities. It is also to be noted that the Society has been able to find work for some of the most deserving cases, and as its activities are extended it will doubtless be found possible to do even more still in this direction. A word of tribute is due to the volunteers workers and others actively interested in the movement, but their greatest satisfaction arises from the knowledge that they are discharging a really useful piece of communal work. It is now for the public to do its part by providing the means without which the Society will be unable to function to the full extent of its intentions and desires.

The author of this article is chairman of the Forestry Association of Great Britain and founder of The Men of the Trees. Describing the big forestry work inaugurated by President Roosevelt under N.R.A., he pleads for a forestry scheme for Britain, to provide healthy employment for thousands who are out of work.

TO the man who enjoys three square meals a day it may or may not be of concern that there are thousands for whom life offers no prospects in their old occupations. Tens of thousands, more, leaving school, and not knowing where to look for employment, are suffering from moral and physical deterioration.

To them and those concerned in their future welfare, news of the success of the Forestry Camps of America may bring fresh hope and even suggest to our own Government a means of providing immediate employment for many.

My work as Forestry Adviser in America enables me to speak from personal experience of the forestry work inaugurated by President Roosevelt. After his inauguration, one of his first measures was the establishment of a volunteer civil conservation corps of young men, and this proved to be one of the most popular schemes carried through under the New Deal.

I have seen these young men living very close to nature and camped mostly in the wildest places, for it is usually in such places that the forest can best be improved. Here in the woods their meals were in the open, even in pouring rain. They had to fetch and carry water, and cut wood for fuel. Except for their daily ration they were dependent upon themselves for everything.

Healthy? Of course they were healthy, both in mind and body. More than that, they were creative. They had hewed a home from the wilderness and were carrying out work of national importance.

They were thinning and improving the forests of their land, cutting fire lines for protection, and planting trees—not only to produce timber, but to conserve moisture and reduce the risk of droughts.

To-day there are over 350,000 of them working in the woods. Ask any one of them whether he would change his life for city lights and he would laugh at you—he simply would not be in camp unless he wanted to be. There are many more applications than vacancies.

Do they work? Judge for yourself when I tell you that this army of woodmen and foresters has in the course of one year saved over £45,000,000 worth of forest from being lost by fire. They have improved 5,000,000 acres by thinning, clearing and other means, and over 300,000 acres have been freshly planted with trees. In addition, campaigns against tree diseases and harmful insects have been carried out on 10,000,000 acres.

More important, however, than material gains is the effect of such work on moral. I believe that in England to-day the overwhelming majority of unemployed who are now walking the streets and receiving relief would infinitely prefer to work like the lads in the forest camps of America. They would like to plant up those derelict-looking slag heaps which scar the face of the land and turn the Black Country into beautiful forest scenery.

Forestry is of urgent importance to England now. Although we have beautiful trees, our country is very badly off for forests. During the war four-fifths of our woodlands were sacrificed. That is having an adverse effect on our water supply. At the present rate of planting it will take 140 years to regain the position held before the war.

Furthermore, in a single year we have paid to foreign countries over £70,000,000 for timber, much of which might have been grown at home, providing work for thousands.

The Forestry Association of Great Britain is supporting a plan for a nationally-conceived scheme to give employment to 20,000 people in forestry on three million acres of waste land, half of which is in England and Wales and half in Scotland. What is the reason why this plan should not be put into operation at once? It has been calculated that every day this plan is postponed the loss to the nation is over £200,000 in timber which might be growing on those three million idle acres and producing this value of timber daily.

Before the war there were about 40 uses for wood. To-day there are over 4,000 uses for forest products in one form or another. The U.S.A. had cut seven-eighths of its virgin forest and while it is already Canada's largest customer, it is now being driven back on Russia for supplies, and that country, at the present rate of cutting, will deplete its accessible forests in thirty or forty years.

In view of the present world situation it would be unwise to continue to depend so greatly upon other nations to supply our needs. Although we are no longer dependent upon "Wooden Walls" as bulwarks of defence, nevertheless wood still plays an important part in our national safety. It has been well said that if a nation saves the trees, the trees will save the nation.

"And we'll send him to some swell college, where we can drive to on week-ends."

The Very Idea!

A DOG'S LIFE

By George

DEAR GEORGE, As a Peakite of considerable longevity I wish to draw your attention to the attempts being made by our local magistrates to disparage the status of Peak Dwellers and Their Dogs.

I refer, Sir, to the invidious practice of imposing a fine of $15 on dogs which commit offences on the Kowloon side as against a mere $10 fine on this side.

The Secretary of the Dear Dogs Society has asked me to say that we on this side feel rather piqued at the distinction.

Is it meant to be a slur on the quality of the dogs on this side? If so I may point out that many residents are proud of the fact that their pets have a longer pedigree than their owners in many cases, whereas a Kowloon dog's pedigree is no longer than a dachshund.

May I beg, Sir, for the discontinuation of a practice which, while it promotes bad feeling between the taipan and the clerk also aims a blow at the social status of the canine population on this side.

In the meantime an attitude of passive resistance is being maintained here, the dogs refusing to leave the house except for the most necessary purposes.

I enclose $50 collected from Peak dwellers as a donation to the S.P.C.A. and trust that the public will not allow matters to remain where they are at present.

Yours etc.,

S. Paniel.

YUGO-SLAV GUARDS OPEN FIRE

HUNGARIAN SHOT DEAD

NEW DISPUTE NOW FEARED

Budapest, Oct. 16. The border population is becoming most anxious owing to the Yugo-Slavian frontier guards' shooting of a Hungarian yesterday.

The Hungarian, Franz Konec, was shot dead when he accidentally crossed the frontier.

The incident is regarded as the outcome of the excitement in Yugo-Slavia following assassination of King Alexander.

In view of past frontier incidents, which led to disputes which the League of Nations considered earlier in the year, similar troubles are feared.—Reuter.

TERRORISTS ROUNDED UP.

(Special to "Telegraph")

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Magazine, October 17, 1934, n.m.)

Melun, Oct. 16.

There was a dramatic moment at the police station here to-day when the head of the Yugo-Slavian police walked up to the man Malny, suspected member of the terrorist gang which murdered King Alexander of Yugo-Slavia, and who was arrested yesterday.

The Belgrade official scrutinized the prisoner for a few minutes and then identified him as a former chauffeur employed in Belgrade.

Malny thereupon admitted that his real name was Miron, that he was born in 1908 in Yugo-Slavia. He confessed that he had been under orders to shoot King Alexander and was beside the assassin Kalemek, killed by police sabres, at the time of the crime. But he admitted that he was too frightened to participate in the actual killing.

Knowing that, by his participation in the assassination, he was liable to sentence of death, he did not rejoin his companions who were arrested just outside Marseilles two days after the murder.—Reuter Special.

CAREER OF TERRORISM.

Paris, Oct. 16.

The Belgrade police, in co-operation with the French authorities, have definitely established the identity of King Alexander's assassin, whose fingerprints have been found to correspond with those of Vladimir Georgievich Teheromzemski, born in Macedonia in 1897, who became a member of the Macedonian terrorist organisation and who committed two Bulgarian political assassinations in 1924.

He was sentenced to death for these crimes in 1932 but was released in the general amnesty shortly afterwards, and then joined a Croat terrorist organisation.—Reuter.

Murder Appeal Dismissed

"RATIONAL CONCLUSION"

The Court of Criminal Appeal this morning dismissed the appeal against the conviction and sentence to death of Ng Lok-yuen for the murder of Michael Pine.

Dealing with the admissibility of the evidence of Mrs. Fairburn, Mr. Justice Jackson said that counsel for the appellant submitted that the evidence was inadmissible and should not have been put to the jury in the absence of the evidence of Mary Pine, but the Court felt no hesitation in coming to the conclusion that her evidence formed part of the res gestae and was therefore admissible.

"With regard to the refusal of the learned Trial Judge to withdraw the case from the jury at the close of the case for the Crown," added Mr. Justice Jackson, "we are satisfied that the cumulative effect of the evidence for the prosecution was such as to call for an explanation on the part of the appellant. We therefore consider that the learned Trial Judge was correct in refusing to withdraw the case from the jury."

PROPER DISCRETION.

"The point that the Trial Judge refused to withdraw the case from the jury on the failure of the Crown to produce Mary Pine as a witness was a matter for the discretion of the Trial Judge with which we have no power to interfere. In this case, we consider that the discretion was properly exercised."

Referring to the next ground of appeal—that the verdict was against the weight of the evidence—Mr. Justice Jackson said that in order to succeed, it was for the appellant to show that the verdict was unreasonable and could not be supported having regard to the evidence.

In the opinion of the Court, the evidence showed that the appellant had both the opportunity and the motive for committing the crime, and the fact that he was seen to have thrown two of the children from the bridge into the nullah and was observed being carried by the current down the nullah at the same time as Norman Pine and Michael and Mary Pine were being carried along it, led one irresistibly to the conclusion that all five children and the appellant entered the nullah at approximately the same time.

COINCIDENCE TOO GREAT.

The defence had admitted that the appellant threw or dropped Tony Flood and Fay Bromley into the nullah, but suggested that the other children either accidentally fell from the bridge into the nullah, or that they climbed into the nullah and then accidentally slipped into the water. "We think it to be too great a coincidence that the other three children should have accidentally fallen into the nullah at the same time as the appellant threw Tony Flood and Fay Bromley into the water," Mr. Justice Jackson continued. "We therefore consider the verdict not to have been against the weight of the evidence."

Coming to the question of fact, it had been submitted that there was a miscarriage of justice in that the statement in the Crown opening relating to Mary Pine's evidence seriously prejudiced the defence. Learned counsel for the appellant submitted that the words used by counsel for the Crown had such a material bearing on the issue and were of such serious import that the jury could not, notwithstanding any caution by the Judge, put the matter entirely from their minds.

JURY WARNED.

The Court could not agree with that contention, for the statements referred to were not supported by any evidence, and the Trial Judge had taken special care not only to warn the jury to pay no attention to those remarks, but throughout his summing-up, he impressed upon the jury that there was no direct evidence to show that the appellant had thrown Michael Pine into the nullah, and on at least two occasions he directed them that if they had any reasonable doubt that the appellant caused Michael Pine's death, they should give him the benefit of that doubt.

Bearing this in mind, the Court could not believe that the statements in question made by counsel for the Crown at the opening of the case actuated the minds of the jury when considering their verdict.

"We are of the opinion that, apart from any evidence which Mary Pine might have given, the evidence adduced at the trial was sufficient to enable the jury to arrive at their verdict. We consider that it was the only rational conclusion they could have reached, and that there was therefore

U.S. SEAMEN HELD FOR ASSAULT

UNION'S FEUD CARRIED ON

DOLLAR SHIP'S MEN INVOLVED

Shanghai, Oct. 17. Friction between Union and non-Union seamen on the President Jefferson, which arrived here yesterday from Seattle, caused the removal of seven members of the crew to gaol last night.

It was learned that friction occurred first when the ship reached Yokohama. Fights broke out between the two factions, and one man was so seriously hurt that he had to be taken ashore to hospital in Japan.

Last night the ship's watchman was reported missing and a search disclosed his unconscious body rolled into the dark shadows of the wharf.

Another man was also knocked unconscious and two others were assaulted.

The master of the Jefferson called the U. S. Marshal in Shanghai who boarded the ship and held a parade, the four injured men identifying the seven who attacked them. The seven were arrested.—Reuter.

no miscarriage of justice," continued Mr. Justice Jackson.

NO MISDIRECTION.

Regarding the allegation of misdirection by the Trial Judge, the Court considered that the Trial Judge had dealt sufficiently fully with the defence as to leave no doubt in the minds of the jury what the actual defence was, and there was no misdirection on this point. It was not necessary to deal in detail with all the points of alleged misdirection, but the Court was satisfied that they were devoid of substance.

"In a lengthy summing-up, it is easy to pick out a word here or a phrase there for criticism but we have felt no difficulty in coming to a conclusion that there was no misdirection on any of these points, and we are satisfied that the manner in which the case was left to the jury was eminently fair in every respect. The appeal must therefore be dismissed," said Mr. Justice Jackson.

"We have confined our attention to the points at issue put before us and do not desire that our decision should in any way affect the strong recommendation for mercy made by the jury at the conclusion of the trial," the Court concluded.

Mr. Justice Hayden concurred.

SEA FIRE TRAGEDY FINDINGS

NEGLIGENCE ON MORRO CASTLE

SHIP'S OFFICERS DENOUNCED

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Magazine, October 17, 1934, n.m.)

New York, Oct. 16. The United States Steamboat Inspection Board has issued a scathing report following its investigation of the Morro Castle disaster, denouncing Chief Officer Warm, acting master of the vessel, and his four subordinate deck officers.

The Board has ordered all five men to appear before it on October 29 and show cause why their licences should not be suspended or permanently revoked.

The Board's report, signed by two inspectors, gives no cause for the disaster and fixes no responsibility for the fire which claimed 130 lives, but records the opinion that had the Morro Castle stopped and sent out a wireless distress signal when the fire was discovered, the loss of life would very probably have been lessened.

The report further recalls that the crew, after lowering themselves in the ship's life-boats, did not heed the cries for assistance from the passengers.—Reuter Special.

CREW CRITICISED.

New York, Oct. 16.

The Steamboat Services Inspection Board, inquiring into the Morro Castle tragedy, has ordered Acting-Captain Warm and his four subordinate officers before it on October 29 to show cause why their licences should not be revoked for negligence.

Had the Morro Castle halted and an S.O.S. been flashed as soon as the fire was discovered, the casualties would not have been so great, the Board finds in its report. The crew is criticised severely for darning themselves and ignoring the helpless passengers.—United Press.

FORMATION OF HONGKONG BADMINTON ASSOCIATION

THIS WEEK'S GREAT LONDON "DERBY"

Arsenal Meeting Tottenham At Highbury

COLOURFUL FOOTBALL PROGRAMME

Arsenal's ground records threaten to be shattered on Saturday, when the Highbury team of classical footballers meet Tottenham Hotspurs in the big London "Derby." And not only can attendance figures expect to go by the board; one can also confidently anticipate a brilliant exposition of the modern game of soccer. Both teams take the field fresh from their triumphs of last week, when the Arsenal humbled Manchester City and Spurs went to Roker Park and beat Sunderland.

At the moment the Arsenal are heading the league, and they will naturally be all out to retain that distinctive position. On the other hand here is obvious a rejuvenation in progress in the White Hart Lane camp, and if the Spurs get going they will take a lot of stopping.

Not that this is the only interesting match in the first division. There is Derby County's visit to Manchester, Preston's journey to Pompey (where Stoke last week scored an unexpected victory), and Grimsby's trip to Liverpool. Anything may happen in either of these games.

In the second division we find Bolton on foreign soil for the second Saturday in succession, and this time they are up against the redoubtable Hull City, a nasty nut for any team to crack. Blackpool, Brentford and Fulham enjoy home fixtures, and ought to win in each case, but Manchester United, who have enjoyed a fine run of success lately may find themselves up against it at Newcastle, where desperate efforts are being made to revive a team in the Blues.

There are a couple of tenses in the southern section of the Third Division. Charlton have to visit Coventry and Crystal Palace will be entertained by Clapton Orient. Coventry went down the drain last Saturday, but that was away, and on their own ground are much more formidable. If Charlton win here they will go a long way to establishing themselves as favourites for promotion.

Millwall and Reading are on their own pasture, as are Exeter,

ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL IN THE SCHOOLS

F. A. To Distribute Instructional Book

The Football Association is to distribute more than 20,000 copies of an instructional book on football to public, secondary and preparatory schools throughout the country. This will be the first step in a campaign to influence schools to play Association football. The instructional book is entitled "Football—How to Succeed" and it is written for the National Union of Teachers by the Reverend K. R. G. Hunt, the former English International and Cup Final medalist.

Essex County Football Association will experimentally appoint coaches within its area and if this proves satisfactory, coaches will then be available on application to schools elsewhere. An instructional film for use in the schools is also to be provided. Elementary schools are not barred from these benefits, but most of them are already members of the Schools Football Association.

and appear as safe as anybody for a couple of points apiece.

The outstanding engagement in the northern section is that between Halifax and Chester on the former's enclosure. I prefer the chances of Halifax. Tranmere and Wrexham look fairly safe, but what price Doncaster's chances at Walsall? Here's a sporting proposition to make complete those three away winners!

INTERNATIONAL SOCCER FLARE-UP THREAT

DANGER EMPHASISED BY MATCH AT CLAPTON

NEED FOR COMMON INTERPRETATION OF PLAYING RULES

(By F. M. Carruthers)

Unless something is done to reconcile the Continental with the British view of how football should be played I am afraid there is bound to be serious trouble.

The authorities must recognise the gravity of the present situation, but they are allowing matters to drift. The position is a delicate one, but unless action is taken it will become worse, and there is a real fear that one day international relations will be imperilled.

Throughout the summer leaders of football have regarded with disdain the hickories in cricket and have declared that such things could not possibly occur in their own game, but unless they put out the fire which is already smouldering it will burst alarmingly into flame.

I do not think there was an official who watched the match between Clapton Orient and the Sportklub Rapid of Vienna who was not concerned by much that happened.

AUSTRIANS SURPRISED.

The Austrian players were transparently ignorant of the conditions under which we expect the game to be played. When free kicks were given against them, some for bad fouls, according to our interpretation of the rules, they were mystified and in their own way asked, "What have I done wrong?"

The Continental conception of what is legitimate in defensive play is totally different from our own, and the difficulty arises because we may not say that we are right and they are wrong.

If British and European teams are to continue to meet there must be a better understanding of what is proper.

The chief divergence of view occurs in defensive measures. I doubt very much whether it is true that European players do not use the charge, but they rely mainly on a studied system of obstruction.

RUGBY TACKLES.

There was one case in which a Clapton Orient player was sent headlong as he was about to go after the ball when it was twenty yards away, and the Vienna player who "stopped" him could not understand why he was penalised.

Instances were common of men being pulled off the ball by the arm, and they were even tackled round the waist in Rugby fashion. It was obvious that the Austrians were accustomed to do these things, and that they did not see anything wrong in them.

In many important matters Continental football is different from our own, and although the rules are the same for both I do not see how it is possible for teams to play properly and fairly unless they are observed in the same spirit and with the same intention.

UNFORTUNATE.

There is not a club who have been on the Continent who do not accept the situation as I have stated it and appreciate the dangers.

I believe that Manchester City have made up their minds not to go on tour again, and I am convinced that until matters are adjusted it would be advisable for the matches to be suspended.

It is unfortunate that the Football Association are not members of the International Federation, who govern football in Europe and other countries abroad. They were driven out over the question of payment of a sum for "broken time." But the interests of all the countries are now so closely inter-linked that there ought to be some way of definitely settling the conditions under which all teams should play.

Arsenal Beaten At Blackburn

FIRST DEFEAT OF SEASON

London, Sept. 19.

The Arsenal were beaten for the first time this season at Ewood Park yesterday, where Blackburn Rovers scored twice without reply.

The Champions were not in their best form, probably due to the rain-soaked pitch. Their attacks lacked the usual precision of movement, and when there was shooting to be done the forwards seemed too hurried in their efforts.

Alex James was missed. The quick-tackling Blackburn halves had little difficulty in breaking up the Arsenal attacks, and they also found time to set their own forwards on the path to goal.

The Rovers always looked the more dangerous side, and although they did not score until 34 minutes had elapsed, with a little luck they might have had a substantial lead at the interval.

Bruton drove in a great shot, which cannoned against the body of Haggood, who had fallen back between the posts, and a few minutes later Talbot struck the crossbar with Moss beating.

Apart from the absence of James, for whom Marshall deputised, the Arsenal rested Roberts and Copping, Sidey and John filled the vacancies at centre-half and left-half.

Twenty-five thousand spectators saw Blackburn Rovers exert heavy pressure from the kick-off. Bruton caused Haggood some anxiety with his rushes down the right wing and twice, when the winger broke through, Moss did well to save.

Drake found difficulty in evading the attentions of Carver, the Rovers' centre-half, whenever Marshall gave him a usable pass, and it was left to Bastin to test Binns with a first-time shot from an acute angle.

After thirty-four minutes the Rovers took a deserving lead when a fine concerted movement by their forwards gave Thompson chance to open the score.

It was not until near the end of the game that the Arsenal began to show their real form, and Binns, in the Blackburn goal, was kept busy when the visiting forwards made desperate efforts to save the match.

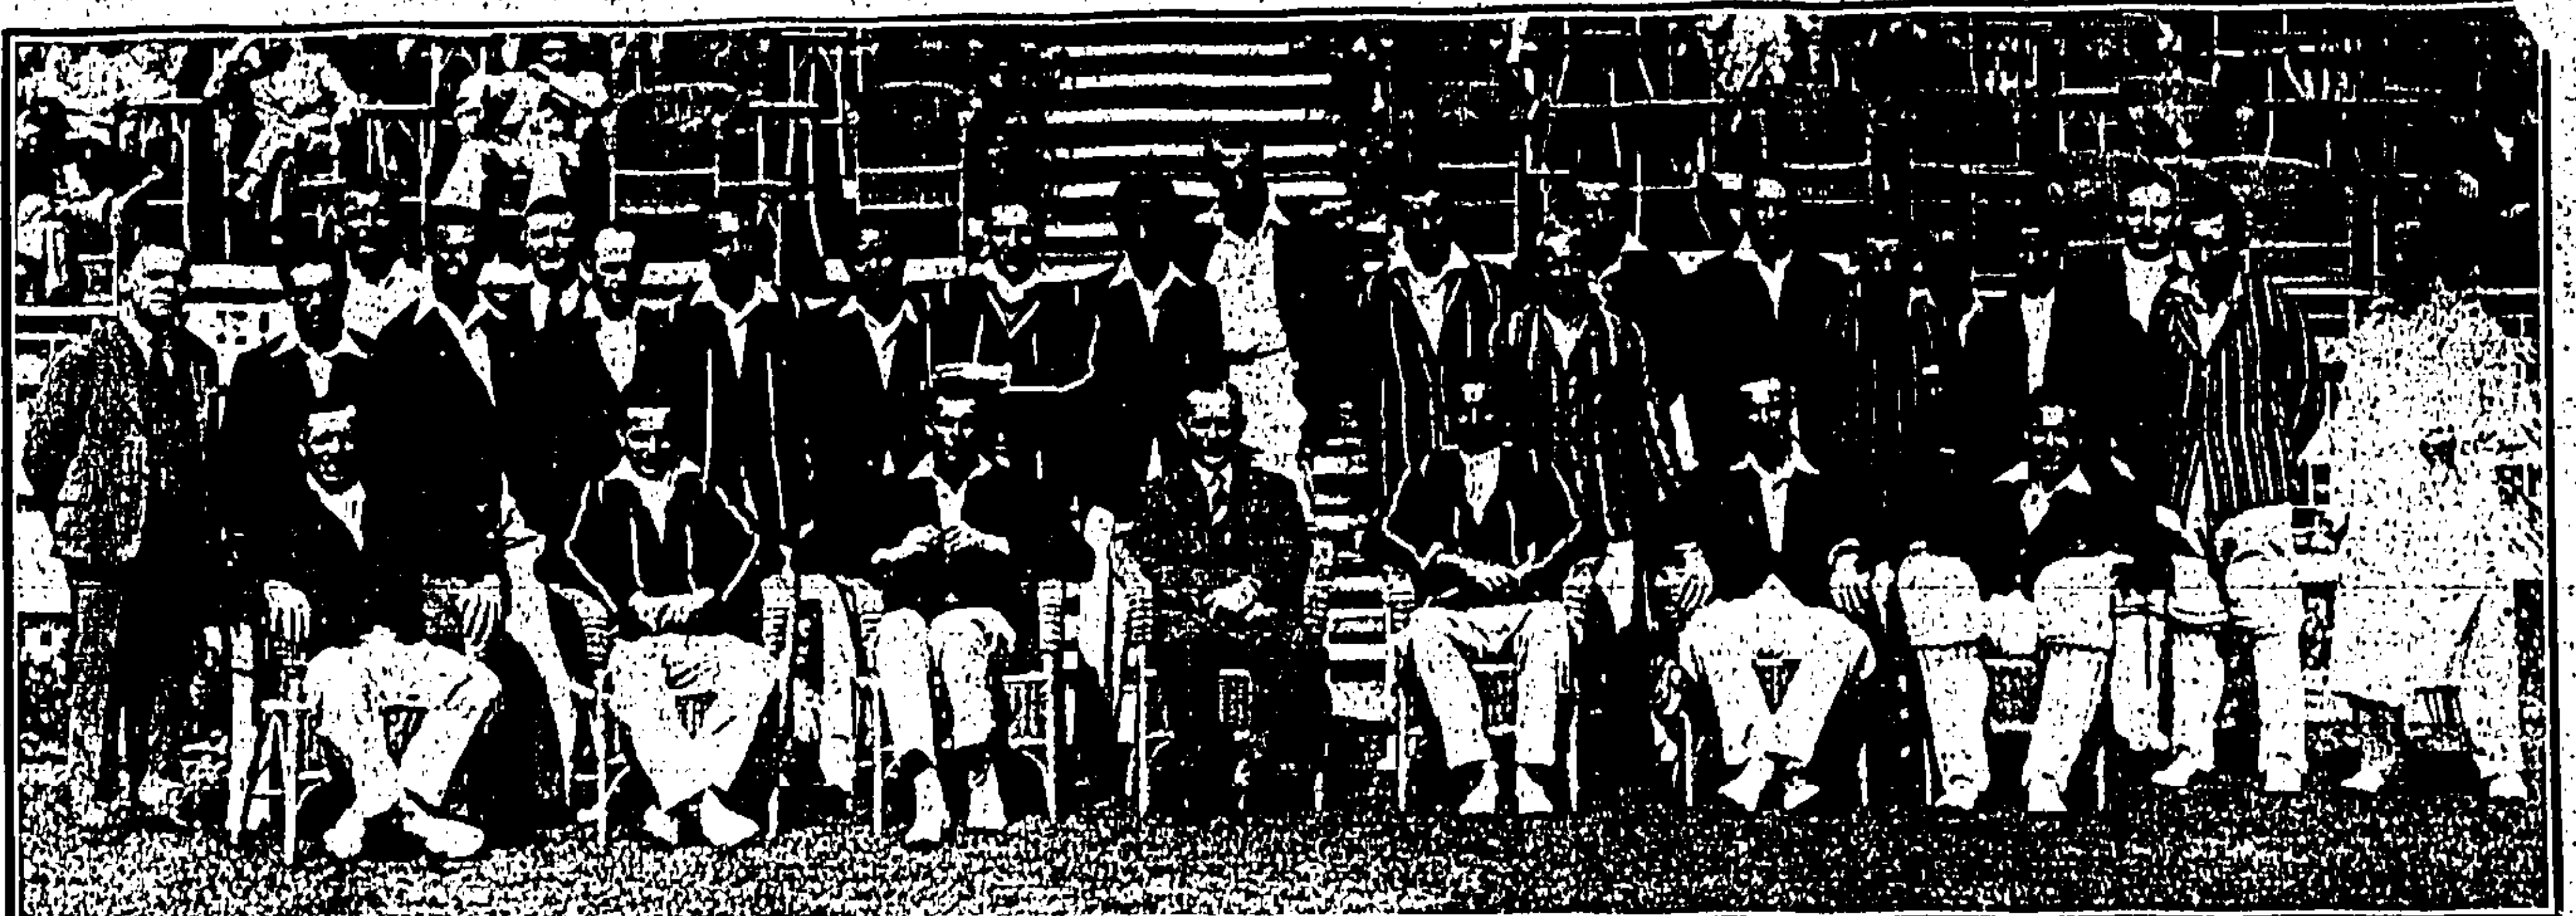

From a breakaway the Rovers increased their lead, again through Thompson.

NEW STATUS FOR LOCAL BADMINTON

ASSOCIATION ESTABLISHED BY UNANIMOUS VOTE

DRAFT RULES AND REGULATIONS ADOPTED YESTERDAY

(By "Veritas")

Backed by the unanimous approval of club representatives, the Hongkong Badminton Association came into being yesterday evening, when, at the same time, the recently formed Badminton League, became extinct as a governing body.

The objects of the Association are to advance and safeguard the interests of badminton in the Colony, and to manage all championships and league competitions.

The game therefore enjoys the protection and assistance of a parent body, and the rapid progress of badminton here can be confidently anticipated. That clubs are keen was evidenced by the close attention paid to the draft regulations and rules and of the many constructive amendments put before the meeting and passed.

SAME OFFICIALS.

Coincident with the formation of the Association, it was also agreed that the officials elected for the Badminton League should continue to hold office in the Association, and they are as follows:

President:—Rev. J. R. Higgs.
Vice-President:—Mr. D. H. Hazell.
Hon. Treasurer:—Mr. R. K. Wood.
Hon. Secretary:—Mr. S. A. Gray.

Executive Committee:—Messrs. F. H. Kwok, R. H. Wong, E. da Sousa, A. E. Collins, C. H. Summers, and Lee Kuan-yeu.

Mr. Dennis H. Hazell, president of yesterday's meeting held in the Board Room of the South China Morning Post, Ltd., the Rev. J. R. Higgs being unable to attend owing to a previous engagement.

VALUE OF AN ASSOCIATION. In proposing that a Badminton Association of Hongkong be formed, the chairman explained that the Executive Committee of the Badminton League had felt that a league in itself was too restricted in its activities and control, and that an Association, with its wider powers of administration was highly desirable.

It was also felt that such an Association would be in the best interests of the game in the Colony and could do more to foster it than a league, which beyond its own competition, could not operate with any authority.

Mr. S. Firth Bernard seconded, and the proposition was unanimously

BEACH CLUB GIRL

By MABEL McELLIOTT

CHAPTER XXXII

Boots and Denis lunched at an inn hanging over a willow-circled pond where ducks swam lazily in the dappled water. Denis was at his most charming, his eyes were full of interest. He was solicitous for her comfort. But his long, lean brown hands lighted cigarette after cigarette and Boots noticed that he ate little. He seemed thinner; he had a fine-drawn look about his mouth. She had sent him a money order for $10 the week before, her first payment against the debt caused by her illness and Russ's burial. He spoke of this gently. He hadn't written to acknowledge it, he said, because he'd wanted to see her first. She was not to bother about that until things were better with her. It was simply a loan between friends. "How are you liking the work?" he wanted to know.

She shrugged. No one was to know how dreadful the long days at Lucy's seemed to her. It was all right, she said. A little tiring sometimes. It was a job; that was all. He gave her a thoughtful look. "I had something in mind," he said. "Remember Masterman, that publisher chap I talked to you about a year ago?"

She remembered. It had been when she was so desperate, so unhappy, not knowing which way to turn. "His firm has an outlet bookshop over on Eighth Street. Nice little place. Copper kettles and spinning wheels, that sort of thing. You know?"

She knew. She remembered passing by, stopping to read the titles on the bright jackets. "Well, the girl—one of the girls, I should say—is leaving in two weeks. She's a southerner. I think she's getting married. They want someone to take the place of the girl who was in the office the other day he was talking to someone on the telephone about it. I thought of you."

"But," she cried, her heart thudding painfully, happily at the thought, "maybe the job's already been taken. Oh, probably it has!"

It was true of Denis to tell her about it too late to do anything about it. Because of course there were always dozens of girls after jobs of the sort. So different from Lucy's, with its time clock and its eternal vigilance, the very eyes of the supervisor, the steady ache in back and feet.

"I don't know. It's a chance anyhow. Worth looking into," Denis warned to the idea. "Look, I'll call you to-morrow—or can I?" "We're not supposed to have telephone calls at the store," she told him. "Can't I call you instead?" "That was all right," Denis said. "She would call him about noon then? Good."

To-day he was a delightful companion, easy to talk to, interested, amusing. He told Lucy stories expertly, he flashed his remembered smile at her occasionally, and when the girl, relaxing in the pleasant atmosphere, responded in kind he laughed heartily at her sallies. Boots had never felt so gay, so witty and assured. She gave him brief sketches of some of the people at the store. She was repaid by the deep chuckle with which they were received.

"I don't believe a word of it," he said indolently when she had finished an imitation of Mr. Babcock, the floor manager, and his famous monologue about "Lacy Service."

"Oh, I assure you!" Boots began, protesting delightedly.

The other lunchers had drifted away. They were quite alone now in the big clean room with the square tables. Waiters drifted to and fro with trays of shining, empty glasses and someone turned on a radio in an inner room. A nasal tenor wailed the refrain:

"You have to-a-ken my heart . . . Suddenly, all the bright scene revolved kaleidoscopically for the girl. She was dizzy; her palms were wet where was some magic in the air, something had sprung up between her and this lean, long-legged young man with the narrow dark eyes and the reluctantly won smile.

"Boots . . . Barbara . . . he leaned toward her, his brown hand capturing her small white one. "Do you know you're most awfully pretty to-day?"

The mists cleared away the landscape righted itself, and only her heart, pounding, pounding under the thin organdie of her blouse, testified to the madness of the moment.

"Really?" "This was nonsense, she reminded herself swiftly and sternly. She was Russ Lund's widow and Denis was in love with Kay Chillingford. He wasn't in the least interested in her. That speech he had just uttered was the merest pleasantry, the lightest compliment.

Confused, she gathered up her purse and gloves. "We—we really ought to be getting back," she protested, looking vaguely about her.

Denis smiled. Oh, come, he argued, how about swimming? How about going on down to Easthampton? The Cranes, his cousins, had been asking him to drop in for ages. They had bathhouses simply running over with extra bathing suits.

"I don't know," Boots told him, wavering. The prospect was enticing. The rest of this golden, breezy afternoon with this man as against a long, lonely evening in her room. Wisdom counselled flight but she was young and inclination won.

She might as well enjoy all this she told herself recklessly the car sped along the shaded, dipping road where every vista was a delight. To-morrow she would be back among the chintzes, neat in her thin black with the white collar, but tired, jaded under her new sun-burn. She might as well have this day to remember.

The Cranes, a long-legged set of youngsters with blazing blue eyes and hasty laws, variously introduced as Jimmy, Kitty and Leo, flung themselves upon Denis with enthusiasm.

"You brought a girl? Well," said Leo, surveying Boots with interest. Jimmy and Kitty, the twins, announced that Mother was at the Hayfield's garden party. Nobody knew why or how she'd got there but somebody must call for her at seven. Meantime would Boots have a cocktail? Would somebody get her a bathing suit?

She dressed in a big, airy cabana at the water's very edge. The heady tang of salt air was in her nostrils. No cocktail would have affected her like this. It was like wine.

Shyly she came out into the dazzling light. The others were variously disposed. Kitty was lying on a canvas cot under a striped red and white umbrella. Leo was agitating a mammoth silver shaker. Denis, already in bathing kit, sat tailor-fashion on a rug at the edge of Kitty's cot, conversing with his cousin in low tones. As Boots appeared he jumped to his feet.

"I say!" Leo shouted. "Doesn't she look simply swell?"

The white rubber suit with its scarily bodice indeed suited the delicious curves of Boots' slim body. She had left her hair free. It was like spun silk in the sunshine.

"First time for me this year," she said, taking the cushion Denis placed for her. She was suddenly almost suffocated with shyness. It was absurd. All her life she had gone unconcernedly about in the briefest of casual swimming garments. Now, with Denis' eyes on her slim rounded shoulders, she felt self-conscious. "Not really?" Kitty drawled. "Don't you mind?"

She nodded. Yes, she hadn't realized until this moment how much she had minded being away from all this, the sea, and the wide burning sand and the warm sun burning over all.

"Miss being a beach club girl?" She looked up, flushing, into Denis' keen eyes. He was uneasy. He had been reading her very thoughts.

"Oh, I do!" And yet—and yet she wasn't sure she meant it. She missed the ease and warm indolence of the life but she was proud to think she had stood on her own feet this year, without anyone's help or connivance. She had proved, at least that she wasn't only a beach club girl—a water—

She let the sand slip through her fingers. "Going in?" Denis had her arm. They were racing along the beach. Now they were clevelling the water with their bodies and the strong, remembered tang of salt was on her lips.

The beautiful clean strokes came back to her and she felt again the pure exhilaration of swimming. Oh, it was delicious to be back in her element of sun and air, and glittering sea after this long interlude, with Denis beside her.

Then she heard Jimmy shout from the water's edge. "Denis! Come along in. Look who's here!" Boots flung the drops out of her eyes. There, elegant and poised, in fluttering summer silks, stood Kay Chillingford.

A Chain Of Evidence.

Received from such widely different countries as America, Burma, Ceylon and the Dutch East Indies, the testimony which follows emphasises the fact that wherever they are used, Baby's Own Tablets, the formula of an eminent specialist in children's ailments, earn the appreciation and praise of thankful parents.

AMERICA: Mrs. Rose Voyer, of Williamette, Conn., U. S. A., writes:—"I have found Baby's Own Tablets a wonderful medicine for children's troubles, especially indigestion and constipation. I have also given them to my children for simple fever and teething, and they always gave relief. I can recommend Baby's Own Tablets to all mothers."

U.K.: Mrs. E. Myles, of Murgate, Upper Burma, states:—"Until I gave my young daughter Baby's Own Tablets she suffered from bowel and stomach troubles which reduced her almost to a skeleton. Now she is strong and well."

CEYLON: Mr. C. Kiel, teacher, St. Patrick's College, Jaffna, Ceylon, reports:—"I have found Baby's Own Tablets an efficacious remedy for constipation, indigestion and sleeplessness from which my two children formerly suffered."

DUTCH EAST INDIES: Madame Cingy Ah May, dressmaker, of 28 Gung Fiemara, Dalen 28, Batavia, writes:—"My daughter, Flora, was troubled with stomach disorders and bowel irregularity. Fortunately a friend recommended Baby's Own Tablets. One vial proved their merits. My daughter is now in good health and robust, thanks to the occasional dose of Baby's Own Tablets she gets."

Baby's Own Tablets are guaranteed safe and good for even the youngest infant or most delicate child. From chemists everywhere.

DEMOCRATS CONFIDENT

MODIFIED PLAN

TAKE HEART FROM PRIMARIES

(Special to "Telegraph")

(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic News Agency. Ordinance, 1891. Received, October 17, 9.57 a.m.)

Washington, Oct. 16. The Democratic National Committee has suspended the compilation of the New Deal Emergency Relief Expenditures list for campaign purposes, apparently reflecting the Democratic belief that the November elections are already won, and with votes to spare.

The results of primaries everywhere seem to indicate that the Democrats are still in high favour with the country and where they stand a chance of losing, as against Senator La Follette and Mr. Upton Sinclair, they have tentatively supported these antagonistic candidates and made of them potential allies.—United Press.

LONDON DOCK IMPROVEMENT

SCHEME TO COST
£150,000

London, Oct. 16.

A scheme for extensive replanning of the approaches to the vast system of docks in the Port of London is announced by the Ministry of Transport.

London is the biggest and busiest port in the world, and although £15,000,000 has been spent in the last 25 years on its docks, the roads leading to them have not kept pace with these improvements and enlargements.

Under the present scheme, which will cost £150,000, new roads are to be made, existing roads are to be widened and improved, ten bridges are to be reconstructed or eliminated, and a system of viaducts, to obviate delays at level crossings, is to be inaugurated. Some of this work has already begun.

The cost will be shared between the Transport Ministry, the Port of London Authority, the London County Council and five local authorities.—British Wireless.
